State, Federal Governments Partner With PennAg To Fight Salmonella, Assure Egg Quality

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Representatives of the state departments of Agriculture and Health, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, and PennAg Industries Association Inc. were to have signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) yesterday (May 28) outlining each entity's responsibilities in the fight against Salmonella Enteritidis (SE) and to assure the quality of Pennsylvania eggs.

The event is noteworthy because it marks national recognition of the value of the state's Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP).

The memorandum is also, and perhaps more especially, noteworthy because it represents a commitment by all three organizations to work collaboratively for food safety.

State Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr., state Secretary of Health Daniel Hoffman, a representative from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, and Walt Peechatka, executive vice president of PennAg Industries Association Inc., were expected to have signed the memorandum during a press event at the state Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

The event was to have been held too late for newspaper deadline.

The seven-page memorandum outlines the responsibilities of each organization in an attempt to further cooperation, communications and sharing of information all in the effort to better ensure the consuming public's trust in the safety of eggs produced and processed in Pennsylvania.

The term "partnership" is used to signify the working relationship

National Dairy Shrine To Celebrate 50th Anniversary

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. — "A Golden Anniversary is a very special moment in time. It represents commitment, staying power, and meaningful service. All these describe the 50 years of existence of National Dairy Shrine."

This quote is taken from the opening introduction of the just-published book, "National Dairy Shrine's First 50 Years."

This book was written to assist in the commemoration of National Dairy Shrine's 50th Anniversary Celebration which is to take place on Saturday, June 12, at the National Dairy Shrine Visitor's Center in Fort Atkinson, Wis. The Visitor's Center showcases the past, present and future of the dairy industry, while housing the organization's extensive collection of dairy artifacts and memorabilia.

The golden celebration will begin with visitation time from 8:30-10 a.m. Following the visitation, the official program will start at 10 a.m. and end at noon for the anniversary luncheon.

Following the luncheon, from

Timber Expo's First Farm Show Complex Appearance Impresses Thousands

ANDY ANDREWS

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the first time, Timber '99, Pennsylvania's major forest products industry exposition, was open to the public at its new location here at the Farm Show Complex late last week.

Where normally the expo would attract only several hundred loggers, woodland owners, and wood products industry representatives, conducting the expo at the Farm Show Complex proved profitable for the more than 100 exhibitors. Attendance peaked at more than a thousand each day of the two-day event, on Friday and Saturday last week, according to expo organizers.

"We are the nation's number one producer of hardwood," said Ronald Andrews, chair of the Pennsylvania Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers Association (HLMA) and president of Deer Park Lumber, Tunkhannock.

As the state's seventh largest employer, the industry is home to 85,000 workers who produce more than a billion board feet of hardwood lumber each year to meet consumer demand, Andrews noted.

"That is enough wood to circle the globe seven times," he said. "Our wood and paper products are highly valued all over the world."

Pennsylvania's forests now cover more than half of the state, about 17 million acres, said Andrews.

"In the old days, industry cut the trees, took the wood, and moved on," he said. "Today we stay and encourage good forest management and promote programs like the Sustainable Forestry Initiative."

Providing wood products today while assuring trees for tomorrow is "simply the right thing to do," said Andrews.

Sam Hayes, secretary of agriculture, commended the committee in bringing the expo to the Farm Show Complex for the first time.

Hayes believes the expo will continue to "grow and grow and grow." To do so, he presented a check for $22,100 from the state to the HLMA of Pennsylvania.

State forestland comprises more than 2.1 million acres, according to John C. Oliver, secretary, Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR). There are 500,000 private, nonrural landowners in the state.

Delmarva Broiler
ATLANTA, GA.

MAY 26, 1999

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was mixed and irregular and generally no better than fair. Offerings varied by both volume and size from one plant to another, with 3 pound sizes in the closer balance and 3.5 to 4 pound sizes readily available. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were generally 55 to 67 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. In the parts complex, supplies were at least adequate for current inquiry. Buyers generally looked to build floor stocks prior to the holiday weekend, but remained cautious.

#1 in Rumen Availability
Pennfield's Super Flaked Corn™

THE PROCESS INVOLVES

1) Cleaning the corn
2) Soaking or steeping the corn for a prescribed period of time
3) Applying steam to the corn before rolling
4) The specially conditioned corn is then rolled between 2 large rollers
5) The wet flat rolled corn is then processed by a special unit that removes the moisture and dries the finished flake back down to normal corn moisture
6) The finished product resembles a bright yellow corn flake (makes you want to get a bowl full and add milk and sugar)

WHY IS SUPER FLAKED CORN BETTER?

Flat rolled steam flaking disrupts the cellular structure of the corn kernels (gelatinization) and increases sites for microbial attachments resulting in improved starch (carbohydrate) digestion in the rumen. In simple terms, the cow uses more of the nutrients because the rumen bugs can get to them and much less corn nutrient goes out in the manure.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids were steady to slightly lower due to harvest progress and spring wheat planting progress. Corn bids finished steady to slightly higher, supported by additional export sales to South Korea. Soybean bids were lower on planting progress and lack of export orders. Wheat steady to 1 cent lower. Corn mixed. Sorghum steady. Soybeans 2 to 4 cents lower. Corn planters are rolling and although it's late, farmers haven't switched and are planting at a rapid pace. Corn is coming up in many fields that did look bare with no till planting. Hard to tell how many acres have been seeded but now stalks are breaking through the dying foliage that was burned down. Farmers are reluctant to switch to soybeans after many had higher price fertilizers and chemicals put on the ground. They do not want to spend 300.00 per acre to plant 4.00 soybeans.

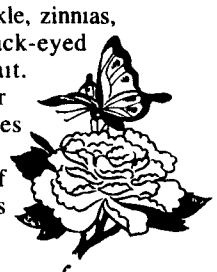
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MAY 31-JUNE 6, 1999

ST. BONIFACE, JUNE 5.

MEMORIAL DAY BLOOMS

Memorial Day comes late this year, on May 31, so gardeners will be ready with their seeds and transplants. Open, sunny areas are key for those who hope to beckon butterflies with their blooms Create wide blazes of a single bright color. Honeysuckle, zinnias, asters, phlox, marigolds, and black-eyed Susans are all good butterfly bait. Choose red, yellow, orange, pink, or purple varieties. Peonies and roses don't hold the same appeal to le papillon. Be sure to minimize use of chemicals on your lawn and gardens to protect these small visitors.



There are fairies at the bottom of our garden!

– Rose Fyleman

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ The crushed flower of red clover makes a quick and available on-site poultice for stings and bites.

PEARS HELENE

4 ripe Bartlett pears, peeled and cored
2-1/2 cups sugar
2-1/2 cups water
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 scoops vanilla ice cream
1 cup chocolate sauce
1/4 cup toasted, slivered almonds

Cut pears in half lengthwise. Put sugar and water into a saucepan and bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Stir in vanilla, add pears, and simmer another 15 minutes, until pears are tender. Allow pears to cool in the syrup. To serve, place one scoop of ice cream onto each of 4 chilled plates. Arrange 2 pear halves on either side of ice cream, then spoon chocolate sauce over all and top with almonds

Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If June be sunny, harvest comes early.

Late blossoms, good fruit.

If north wind blows in June, the rye harvest will be good.

If an aurora appears during warm weather, cold and cloudy weather will follow.

Playing Follow The Leader...Again

The FDA has recently approved a margarine that was developed in Finland that contains a substance that aids in the reduction of cholesterol. Evidently, food scientists have known about this product for quite some time and those in the know have been wondering when the product would come to the U S

So, now it's here to give us a run for our money in butter. Just when butter has been taken off the medical blackmail list, now margarine comes up with another strong competitive selling point

Dr Brian L Perkins, technical services specialist with Monsanto Dairy Business in Twin Falls, ID, had a note on the Dairy-L Internet group site to ask why we couldn't take the substance he calls "a stanol ester" and add it to butter? Then we would have a product that tastes far better than margarine, and also has the capability to lower blood cholesterol

To us, the answer to this question is a no-brainer. Certainly, we should add the cholesterol-reducing product to butter if it helps us to keep the good taste of butter on our dairy customer's plates. A more relevant question is: "Why did we again need to play follow the leader in bringing a new food product to market?

With all the talk about how we need to develop new markets for dairy products, and with all the dollars from check-off moneys taken from the farmer's milk checks to develop these markets and products, we should have a cholesterol-reducing product on the market already

We can't wait for the day when a new dairy product comes on the market that makes the synthetic dairy product makers ask themselves if they should be following the dairy industry's lead

To Expand Understanding of Risk Management

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent, reminds us there is more to risk management than futures, options, contracts and insurance. In addition to these tools, there are many other things farmers may do to help manage their risks. Many of them just simply involve good management.

One is to reduce debt load and cost per unit of production. Another is to have a reserve of cash and supplies such as feed that you may tap into when necessary.

Good biosecurity measures and preventative herd health programs also help. Develop contingency plans for responding to a variety of unexpected situations (death, injuries, labor shortages, drought, fire, loss of markets, lawsuits, etc.).

Have animals at multiple locations and plant crops with different maturity dates. Being a good neighbor, being an asset to the community, being proactive on issues that affect your business, being regulatory compliant and planning for the future are important considerations too.

To Speed Hay Drying

Hay producers in Pennsylvania list unpredictable weather as the number one reason for not being able to make quality hay. According to Dr. Marvin Hall, Penn State Agronomy Department, properly adjusted mower conditioners can cut hay drying time in half.

However, many conditioners have not been adjusted since they were bought and this could be costing the farmer thousands of dollars per year in hay quality and production losses. Quicker drying times reduces the risk of the mowed hay being rained on, synchronizes the drying of leaves and stems which can reduce leaf shatter and allows for quicker regrowth (because the hay will be lying on the stubble for a shorter period of time).

All of these advantages can result in higher quality hay and improved yields. This is the equivalent to dollars in the bank.

To Properly Adjust Hay Conditioner

The hay conditioner should crimp the stem every three to four inches.

The two basic adjustments that affect the extent of crimping are the space between the crimping rolls and the pressure on each roll. The rolls should be adjusted to be as close as possible to each other without touching. Used rollers may not be perfectly round. They will need to be adjusted at the fattest part of the rolls.

The correct pressure on the rolls is not as easily determined. Enough pressure should be applied to adequately crimp the stems and not damage the leaves. Damaged leaves are more prone to leaf shatter than leaves that are not damaged. Damaged leaves will turn dark green or black after crimping. There should be less than five percent damaged leaves with properly adjusted conditioners.

The frequency that conditioners will need to be adjusted depends on the extent of use and the amount of soil particles that are run through the conditioner. Soil will cause the rolls to wear faster and call for more frequent adjustments.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Small minds are subdued by misfortune, but great minds rise above them."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ARE YOU ANSWERING HIS PRAYER?

May 30, 1999

Background Scripture:
John 17
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians: 6:10-20

If I were facing what lay before Jesus when he prayed what is often called his "High-Priestly Prayer," I am afraid my prayer would be one of desperation, gloom, bitterness and feeling sorry for myself. I would be thinking about how I got into this situation, who has let me down, how unjust it is, and can't you get me out of here, Lord?

Jesus would have been fully justified if his own prayer had taken on one or more of those attitudes. No man was ever more unjustly treated. No person had ever been so worthy, so close to God. No person chosen by God would have had more reason to doubt his calling.

When you look at the prayer of Jesus, you find not one example of any of those attitudes. There is no anxiety, no desperation, no bitterness. Instead there is a strong thread of exultation and Jesus uses the terms "glory," "glorify," and "glorified" eight times in the course of it. No wonder the death of Jesus was a triumph for the Father and the Son. No wonder he regarded it as his hour of glory. Arthur John Gossip is right in saying, "Here is no unwilling victim dragged to the altar."

THE HIGH PRIESTLY PRAYER

Not for one moment do I think Jesus wanted to die. He exulted, not in suffering and dying, but in being obedient to his calling. This is the ground for both his glorification and the intercession which he now makes in his prayer. If Jesus had sought to escape or compromise in these late moments of his life, he could not have prayed with the conviction and power that he did. As the High Priest about to make the supreme sacrifice, his prayer carried an even higher level of authenticity.

So, freed of self-pity, despair and remorse, what was it that Jesus lifted up to the Father in this prayer? There are basically four focuses of concern. The first of these is his offering of himself for the Father's purposes, Jn 17:1-5. "Father," Jesus began, the hour has come; glorify thy Son that the Son may glorify thee." Essentially, this is a prayer of commitment. Jesus commits himself to obedience unto death, although, please note, the word "death" is never used. In other words, what lies before him in suffering and death on the cross is of lower concern than the glory that will proceed from it.

The second focus of his prayer is for the welfare of his disciples whom he leaves behind. It is not a prayer of apprehension, but of faith. "And now I am no more in the world, but they are in the world, and I am coming to thee Holy Father. Holy Father, keep them in thy name, which thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are one."

NOT EVEN CLOSE

It occurred to me this day as I read this passage once again that we are not even coming close to fulfilling Jesus' prayer for unity in the Church. I don't mean for one moment that we need to worship in the same buildings, pay our tithes at the same altar, recite the some creeds, nor give our loyalty to the same denominations of Christendom. But, in the deepest and most real sense of the word we do not even come close to being "one, even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee..." (21).

Perhaps you have noticed, as I have, that when you go from one church to another, from one denomination to another one, it is often difficult to feel that you are part of the same something of which they are also a part. These other Christians may seem more like strangers than like brothers and sisters in the Lord. We are influenced more by the things we have that are different, than in the one thing that we all possess—the Living Lord.

Jesus also prays: "I do not pray for these only, but also for those who believe in me through their word, that they may all be one" (20). This is his third focus: those who will come after the original disciples—in short, us! In the night in which Jesus suffered betrayal and arrest, he prayed for us. "The glory which thou hast given me I have given to them, that they may be one even as we are one."

Usually we concern ourselves with God's answers to our prayers. But we are all in a position to answer Christ's prayer for us!

State Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes, right, believes the expo will continue to "grow and grow and grow." To do so, he presented a check for $22,100 from the state to the HLMA of Pennsylvania. about $28 million in business, noted Oliver. But forests are also used for other recreational activities, including hiking, hunting, cross-country skiing, and others.

A member of the DCNR and known worldwide was guest Smokey Bear, who received a loud applause from a couple hundred children from area elementary schools in attendance, and made his way through the crowd.

The expo allows the state to celebrate "its greatest asset," said James M. Seif, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

During the ceremony, Carroll Kline, a contract logger, congratulated the many people who "really try to help the forest industry." He sawed a part of a maple log at the demonstration.

About 1,200 people registered for Friday's events. Another 1,500 were expected to register last Saturday. There were about 105 exhibitors who provided demonstrations of sawing and finishing equipment, packaging and transportation equipment, tools, and other industry materials.

The expo, according to industry organizers, will be held at the Farm Show Complex again in 2001. The expo is held every other year — it was in Clearfield previously. This was the first time the general public was invited to the expo.

The expo included the Wood Magic Science Fair, a mobile interactive wood products laboratory. According to organizers, the program allows children to participate in experiments and demonstrations that show how various wood products are made. They also learn about sustainable forestry and the importance of wood.

Wood-carving demonstrations were also part of the expo.

According to Rick Rufo, O'Shea Lumber, chairman of the Timber Show Committee, other seminars scheduled included "Marketing Wood Products On The Internet," "Exporting Opportunities," "Truck Weighing and Inspection," and "The Game of Logging." The game of logging centered on learning the skills and safety techniques used by professionals.

The HLMA numbers 300 members. Their work represents 75 percent of the one billion board feet manufactured annually in the state.

Fifety-nine percent of Pennsylvania acreage is commercial forest. Almost by accident, according to literature from the Pennsylvania Hardwoods Development Council, Harrisburg, the state became a home to hardwoods. By 1920, virtually all of the state's original white pine and hemlock forests were cut to help build a rapidly growing nation.

But following were a series of statewide fires that destroyed the regenerating young pine saplings, not the abundant young hardwoods. With little competition for soil and light, the state's hardwood forests were born.

Red maple, red oak, black cherry, and sugar maple are most common of the hardwoods, comprising 47 percent of the growing stock and sawtimber. The caliber of the hardwood is high — 34 percent is classified U.S. Forest Service Log Grade 1 or 2. Nearly half of the red oak volume is in this range.

More than 2,100 hardwood firms make their home in Pennsylvania, including Pennsylvania House, Crawford Furniture, Hillerich and Bradsby (manufacturers of the Louisville Slugger®), International Paper, and Weyerhaeuser, among others.

Product lines cover the entire hardwood spectrum, including lumber, paper, veneer, plywood, cabinetry, furniture, and other items.

Pennsylvania hardwood volume is number one in the country, with a growing stock amounting to 11.9 billion cubic feet.

Percentage of stock in sawtimber stands is 54 percent. Average annual growth is 35.5 cubic feet per acre and average annual harvest is 17.2 cubic feet per acre.

Trusted Borden® Brand Positions DFA In Booming Cheese Markets

In American retail markets gone mad for cheese (76 percent of all American households consume cheese, according to a USDA study), the Borden® brand and Elsie™ the Cow are household names to millions. To Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) members, they are an important entrée to grocer dairy cases and consumer loyalty across the country.

Through the acquisition of the Borden brand in late 1997, DFA demonstrated a strategic commitment to helping dairy farmers capture a larger share in highly competitive food markets. For nearly 70 years, Borden and Elsie have become icons for great taste, wholesome quality and value to cheese-loving Americans — a market in which milk producers have traditionally struggled to directly compete for profits.

"As we look to the future of our cheese business, we are excited by the acquisition of the Borden label," says Lonnie Spurgeon, senior vice president and chief operating officer for the DFA Dairy Foods Group. "It gives us access to an established and highly regarded name in the retail market, where we see opportunity for future growth and product expansion."

In light of a 1996 USDA study that shows domestic per capita cheese consumption climbing by 2 percent annually — up a total of 27 percent since 1980 — the acquisition provides an important foothold for DFA in cheese product development and marketing.

"Research has shown that, in the United States, Borden is the most recognized natural dairy brand, with an unaided consumer awareness score of 15 percent," Spurgeon explains. "That's a solid foundation upon which we can continue to build and grow Borden product success and reputation.

"The report also indicates that consumers identify convenience as the No. 1 reason to purchase single-wrapped cheese," Spurgeon adds. "That's where the Borden label comes in. Borden is one of the country's leading manufacturers of cheese singles in regular, low-fat and no-fat choices.

"Our vision is to expand Borden product lines while capitalizing on its brand name identity and product reputation," Spurgeon says. "When consumers buy cheese, we want them to think Borden."

steers ended mostly steady, after uneven trading earlier in the week. Slaughter cow prices closed 1.50-2.50 lower caused by the drop in boneless beef demand, as retailers have already stocked their cases for the holiday weekend. However slaughter bulls sold .50-1.00 higher on good local demand. Supply included 55 percent slaughter steers, 6 percent slaughter heifers, 27 percent slaughter cows, 4 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance made up of feeder cattle.

ASA Appeals To Congress For Emergency Supplemental Appropriations For Agriculture

SAINT LOUIS Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) is urging congressional leaders to address the needs of American agriculture in areas of Conference Committee on emergency supplemental appropriations legislation for FY99.

ASA is requesting that Congressional Conferees include $2.8 billion in additional income support payments to producers and language directing the U.S. Department of Agriculture to implement a $1 billion concessional sale and donation program for soybeans and soy products.

ASA President Mike Yost, a soybean producer from Murdock, Minn., said "As Conferees consider current and projected low farm prices, ASA is requesting Congressional support for making an additional $2.8 billion in income support available to producers of 1999 crops through AMTA-type payments."

ASA believes a payment of 50 percent of the amount determined by the AMTA formula would be appropriate at this time, considering that the duration of low prices over the past year has prevented producers from locking-in acceptable prices for affected crops.

In addition, ASA is asking Congressional leaders to include language directing USDA to implement a $1 billion export assistance program for soy. ASA and the National Oilseed Processors Association (NOPA) recently requested that USDA initiate a donation and concessional sales export assistance program to boost soybean prices and producer income and to reduce the cost of the soybean marketing loan program. ASA and NOPA have provided the department with a list of countries capable of importing specified quantities of soybeans and soy products valued at $1 billion without displacing regular commercial sales.

"Since soybeans are not included in the formula for determining AMTA payments, it will be necessary to provide equitable support for soybean producers," Yost said. "Facing even lower current and projected soybean prices, ASA is asking Congress to including funding for its export assistance initiative in the emergency supplemental legislation, or to obtain a commitment from the Clinton Administration to immediately announce and proceed with procurement and distribution operations for this program."

Mertztown Farmer's Decision To Quit Hog Business A Tough Decision, Involves Many Factors

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MERTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Larry and Linda Moyer tried all they could to succeed as independent, small, swine farrow-to-finish operators: learned all they could about swine production, invested heavily in the right equipment and facilities, and used all the best genetics.

But since 1992, when they took over the operation of Brookvue Farms in the agriculturally robust section lining the Little Lehigh Creek in the lower Lehigh Valley, near Allentown, even in the best of years, "we never broke even," said Larry Moyer at his farm recently.

Despite the best genetics money could buy, the most updated equipment, and with plenty of land to grow their own feed, the hog market plunged disastrously at the close of last year. There was no way the Moyers could go on.

So in October, they ceased trying. They liquidated 1,200 hogs.

Moyer remembers writing a letter, asking U.S. Ag Secretary Dan Glickman to do what he could to help the smaller farmers, while increasingly more pork is being produced by less farms.

Moyer points to some chilling facts: more than 40 percent of all pork sold in the U.S. is produced by only 2.5 percent of the hog farmers.

Larry, a graduate of Lehigh University who is a chartered life underwriter and chartered financial consultant, also owns an insurance and securities buisness. His wife Linda is a Penn State graduate and an elementary school teacher for 29 years. The Moyers took over the farm from Linda's parents, Bill and Marge Gillespie, in 1992. Her father, honored as Pennsylvania Livestock Man of the Year in 1985, died in 1987. Bill Gillespie sold feed as territorial manager for Beacon Feeds in northern New Jersey and moved, in 1963, to one of two farms, both inherited by the Moyers.

Larry said that Linda's father started out with Polled Hereford cattle, operating a small cow/calf herd. While the Moyers no longer have the farrow-to-finish operation, they maintain a small Polled Hereford herd, with 11 cows, one bull, and calves and steers, totalling about 30 head.

At the 263-acre farm spread across two counties, Lehigh and Berks, about 225 are tillable. Tillable acres include 195 in corn, 17 in wheat, and about the same number of acres in mixed hay.

Moyer noted there were enough acres to grow the crops they needed for the livestock, with some left over to sell.

But providing feed wasn't the problem.

A combination of factors put the farrow-to-finish operation out of business. Moyer points to the fact that because of anticipated overseas demand for U.S. pork, producers increased production substantially. However, becausae of a strong dollar making U.S. pork too expensive, the exports never increased to the levels expected.

U.S. producers, particularly the large ones, nevertheless continued to build new facilities and produce more pork than could be absorbed internationally and domestically, resulting in even lower prices.

Linda said that in the 1970s, when her father brought swine to market, the years were "excellent for pork producers." So in January 1992, the Moyers took over the farm, managed by Marion Wilson, hired eight years earlier by Linda's father.

At the time, there were about 60 sows. Larry believed the numbers weren't sufficient to sustain a profitable operation. So they set out to at least double the number, invest in buildings and equipment, improve the genetics, and beef up management.

A new farrowing house was constructed in 1994. A finisher house, with insulated side curtains, was also erected. Larry and Linda look over the house.

While the Moyers no longer have the farrow-to-finish operation, they maintain a small Polled Hereford herd, with 11 cows, one bull, and calves and steers, totalling about 30 head.

Most new construction and renovations were complete by 1994, and a roller mill, installed in 1997, is still in place today.

Moyer reasoned that if the farm with 60 sows could finish 800 head per year, that by doubling the sow population, they should finish at least 1,600 head.

That number — 1,600 — was critical. It was break-even.

Moyer noted he worked out the figures. He knew his plan placed him in the top 10 percent of overall production in the U.S.

He remembered going to the World Pork Expo, visiting breeders and swine experts throughout the country, and traveling to England to speak with National Hog Farmer columnist and international swine consultant John Gadd.

Soon after, Moyer contacted Tim Hollinger of Hollinger Genetics in Willard, Ohio. Hollinger, an Ohio State University graduate, knew about the emerging, leaner, better swine genetics. Feed formulation was brought in through Suidae Technology, Inc., based in Greensburg, Ind. The premix was brought in from DuCoa, located in St. Louis, Mo.

A new farrowing house was constructed in 1994. A finisher house, with insulated side curtains, was also erected.

Most new construction was complete by 1994, and a roller mill, still in place today, was installed in 1997. Maximum capacity of the finisher was 480 head, with capacity for an additional 250 head in the barn.

In addition, in 1991, two new corn bins were installed. One has a 15,000-bushel capacity for storage and another a 12,000-bushel capacity drying bin.

Moyer figured that, with all their plans, they could obtain about 20 pigs per sow per year. With 120 sows, that would mean about 2,400 head. After all, break-even was only 1,600 head.

But even in the best year, the most the Moyers could finish was 1,460 head.

Even when the prices were higher, in 1993, and again in 1996-1997, despite weathering some downturns in the market in 1994-1995, Moyer continued to believe he could hit at least break-even.

To no avail.

Another problem was finding good, quality workers.

"It was a personnel decision," said Moyer.

They wanted to hire workers experienced with swine production in the valley, but not college graduates. They paid what they believed an equitable wage, yet finding workers who understood new technologies, were dedicated, who could work with minimum supervision, and were progressive, proved ultimately too challenging.

"It was tough to find good help," said Linda. "We got tired."

A friend and neighbor, Dan Hunsicker, was always available to answer questions regarding his crops. His many years of ag experience and advice regarding general farm management was extremely helpful. Both believe that, without him, it would have been even harder to run the farm.

Both Dan and Larry are charter members and active in the Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club, which was extremely beneficial in educating them regarding the various methods of marketing their grain crops.

But finding reliable workers to manage the farrow-to-finish barns, take care of the livestock at critical times such as breeding, and be on hand should problems arise proved impossible.

Linda remembers how progressive and open to new ideas her farther, William Gillespie, was. She said he would conduct soil tests, rely on Penn State Extension Service programs and expertise, use fertilizer wisely, and was generally more progressive in using newer methods, compared to the old-time methods used in those days.

They were looking for managers just as progressive, flexible, and willing to learn, as Linda's father — to no avail.

Larry, who has been involved in the securities and insurance business for 35 years, and Linda, who teaches fourth grade at Brandywine Heights Area School District, sold the equipment in December last year.

They decided to maintain the buildings, in case a farmer would like to lease them.

At times, Larry believed that excellent crop prices could help in years when the market turned sour for hogs. But the past several years have seen nothing but depressed corn prices.

The use of a roller mill for feed cut 8-10 percent of feed costs because it provided a more uniform grind, little or no dust, with healthier bites for the livestock. That's still in place, ready to use.

For those who want to take over, Moyer believes in less than a week, an operator could be up and running.

The farm has all Class I soils, some of the most fertile in the state. On the wall in his office there are numerous plaques for top placings in the state corn club contest, attesting to good growing conditions.

Like other farmers, Larry Moyer didn't want to sign a contract

Gene Could Help Hog Producers Pig Pick The Best

COLUMBUS, Ohio – A gene found to improve the reproductive traits of female pigs could some day help producers select the best sows for their herds, said Ohio State University animal scientist Keith Irvin.

For the past two years, Irvin and other Ohio State scientists have been studying the effects of the estrogen receptor, or ESR, gene on the reproductive tracts of sows at the Western Branch of the university's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, near South Charleston, Ohio. Early results have been positive.

"Early trends show that with the ESR gene, more fetuses survive to become pigs, a sow's uterus is longer and heavier, and the ovulation rate increases," Irvin said. "These are all very important components that determine the reproductive ability of a sow. So things look promising, but we haven't gathered enough data to be sure yet."

Collecting information for the study is slow and difficult because one a sow's DNA is genetically identified and it is bred, the sow then must be slaughtered and its reproductive tract removed and evaluated. Irvin believes it will take another three to four years to collect enough information to complete the project.

Ohio State University graduates research associate Brad Isler presented the preliminary results of the research at the American Society of Animal Science and American Diary Science Association Midwest Sectional meeting in Des Moines, Iowa, March 15-17.

Selecting which sows to keep based on physical aspects, especially litter size, is a traditional tool used by producers to improve herds. But litter size is influenced by many genes and environmental conditions, so if a producer just selects females based on large litters it could take a long time to make much progress, Irvin said.

Because so many genes have small effects on reproductive performance, selecting sows based on molecular genetics was not possible until recently, he said. Researchers at Iowa State University played a major role in the identification of the ESR gene and its large effect on reproduction and litter size. That really gave selection based on molecular genetics a boost, he said.

If it does prove beneficial, producers could test a sow's DNA by collecting a blood sample and having it analyzed at a genetics lab. Other easier methods of evaluating pig DNA are being studied, such as using a DNA sample from clipped pig tails or ear notches removed for identification.

For more information about the potential impact of the ESR gene on the reproductive performance of pigs, interested people can contact Irvin at Ohio State University at (614) 292-6407.

Farmer's Decision

with a big feed company. Since the farm was established, the Moyers wanted to remain independent, not an "employee" of a feed provider.

All that led up to the decision to leave the swine business.

"The U.S. is losing one of its great heritages — the agriculture family," said Larry. "This is a great way to raise a family."

The Moyers have a son and daughter — Dave, 35, and Sue, 32, both graduates of Lehigh University, like their father. Sue, with a degree in finance, worked for about six years in the securities and investment business. Her husband, Ben Outt, also a Lehigh graduate, is an engineer with Proctor and Gamble. Ben and Sue are parents of a 1-year-old daughter, Alexis. The Moyer's son Dave is an electrical engineer with his own business in Alexandria, Va.

Farm founder William J. Gillespie, with degrees from Penn State, sold feed in New Jetsey. His wife, Marge, taught French in high school. Marge studied in France in the 1930s, moving when she was 19 years old to Europe — something almost unheard of in those days.

Larry's father, Earl, was a contractor and builder. Larry's grandfather, William, was a blacksmith and worked on many farms in his younger days and after retirement. Larry's mother, Pauline, raised five children and worked in a glove factory and dress factory as a seamstress.

Larry said she longed to attend college and become a teacher, but her dad, Ammon Strunk, who owned a butcher business with his brother, said that unless all four daughters went to college, none of them would go. "She never had the opportunity," Larry said.

The Moyers' decision to leave hog farming is profiled in a brochure completed by Jill MacKenzie and Loni Kemp of the Minnesota Project in April this year. Also, Moyer has been profiled in past issues of Lancaster Farming for his Five-Acre Corn Club awards.

For now, the Moyers have decided to concentrate on their chosen professions and hope to find someone to lease the buildings and continue swine production. They will also consider selling 200 acres to the right party.

"Here, we have slightly rolling and level terrain, and it's easy to farm," he said.

Lebanon County Conservation District Celebrates 50 Years

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Conservation District (LCCD) was officially 50 years old on May 23.

To celebrate the half-century milestone, current (and a number of former) staff, directors and community supporters held a special event at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds on May 21.

Held from 3-7 p.m., in the large convention barn of the Lebanon Fairground facilities, food and festivities, a petting zoo, and a program recognizing the district's half-century milestone and achievements marked some of the event's highlights.

The program portion consisted of presentations by state Department of Environmental Protection Secretary James Seif, state Sen. David "Chip" Brightbill, three representatives of the county Conservation District board of directors, and District Manager Charles Wertz.

An additional program highlight, there was an unveiling of a new LCCD logo, commissioned from Myerstown-area artist M.J. McFalls, who specializes in natural and historical murals, as well as sculpture and interactive displays.

With the artist on stage, the logo was unvieled by LCCD associate director George Wolff of Myerstown, and DEP Secretary Seif.

McFall's full-color logo presents a symbolic depiction of a traditional Lebanon Valley community, using Lebanon County's political border as a background, framing shape.

The elements of the landscape logo are clouds in a blue sky; a dominant, large tree, resembling an oak; a bird of prey in gliding flight, perhaps a red-tailed hawk; a sun on a horizon of low, rolling mountains; a tall-steepled white-painted church; a limestone-gabled bank barn with trademark slit windows; a small residential-industrial area; and a meandering stream that emanates from the mountains and the sun, and upon whose banks the community is stradled, and the tree grows.

The elements of the logo are typical features found in Lebanon Valley's historic communties.

As with pre-realistic art, the relative proportionality of the elements could be interpreted to reflect the relative importance of those elements to the whole picture that is Lebanon County — the tree is the most dominant and it shelters the residential and economic community; the landscape is second-most dominant and it provides the setting for the community; the bank barn and church are about equal in prominence and flank the community, as though to provide protection and support; and the stream is the connective element, shared by all the other elements.

The Lebanon County Conservation District initials, "LCCD," are at the top of the logo.

The event began with food and visits of the various agency and promotional exhibits, such as dairy princesses, and a review of district accomplishments.

The atmostphere was informal and many of those who attended seemed well acquainted with each other.

Lebanon County Commissioner Jo Ellen Litz, who is also a member of the board of directors, provided opening comments, reminding the audience that a 50th anniversary is considered a "golden" anniversary.

She read from a proclamation that she and the county's other two commissioners had issued the day before.

The somewhat lengthy proclamation mentioned many of the highlights and achievements of projects and programs undertaken by the LCCD, such as some of its pioneering efforts with flood control, storm water, nutrient management, city shade tree planting, computerized soil mapping, etc.

For those unfamiliar with the structure of the conservation district system, it is overseen by the State Conservation Commission, which is currently chaired by Secretary Seif, though chairmanship alternates annually between the state secretary of DEP and the state secretary of Agriculture.

As an aside, state Agriculture

Secretary Samuel Hayes will again be chairman of the SCC on July 1.

Other members of the SCC include its vice chairman Edward Kukuck, a farmer member; Ross Orner, a farmer member; Jack Dehoff, a farmer member; Kenneth Rutt, a farmer member; Lauren Lustig, a public member; Dr. Robert Steele, with the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences; David Trimpey, a public member; Janet Oertly, USDA NRCS state conservationist; and associate (non-voting member) member Dr. Theodore Alter, who oversees Penn State Cooperative Extension.

The SCC staff office is located in the state Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

Federal, state and local funding is used to operate conservation districts and the programs they administer, which also rely upon local and other volunteer support.

The districts, as a whole, were originally started to help stem the loss of soil from farmland, as well as to prevent the resulting sedimentation from choking to death streams and waterways.

This was done through working locally and directly with farmers who, by law, have to have a soil conservation plan in order to till earth.

Over the years, the mission of the districts has expanded, as have the sources of sedimentation.

Now — depending upon the district, the level of involvement and programs approved by the respective director boards, and funding allocations from county and other sources — districts throughout the state do such additional things as sell tree seedlings for erosion control and wildlife habitat, review residential and commercial development plans for soil erosion concerns, work with dirt and gravel roads improvement programs, review and/or support nutrient management planning, work with Chesapeake Bay or other programs, maintain educational programs such as the Enviro-thon program (which has been a strong program in Lebanon County), support environmental awareness programs, and develop working relationships with various non-profit efforts at the local level.

Lebanon County has been noted many times over the years for being one of the most progressive districts.

For example, it has served to help support the organizational and planning efforts behind the Swatara Creek Watershed Association, and a subgroup concerned primarily with the Quittapahelia Creek; has also been involved with the county farmland preservation program; watershed protection and education; and helped to establish, build and educate on the use of agricultural best management practices.

Following the introduction by Litz, a video program was shown with an accompanying sound track of a song performed by Glen Waldeck, a Philadelphia-based "environmental singer/songwriter."

(Waldeck performed live for the group with his guitar and harmonica after the program.)

Commissioner Litz introduced the video, "What About Tomorrow?"

The song lyrics essentially asked questions about the fate and future of a safe, healthy, awe-inspiring environment for human beings the world over.

The video contained clips depicting a variety of environmental extremes — ranging from past and current environmental nightmares and catastrophes, to scenery depicting wild and natural beauty.

The song lyrics were matched fairly closely to the visual depictions.

Following the video, Commissioner Litz introduced DEP Secretary Seif, with Litz commenting on how fortunate Lebanon County has been to have received for many years the attention, cooperation and support of the state's environmental agencies.

According to Seif, Pennsylvania's conservation districts are one of the greatest reasons for the environmental successes the state has been able to achieve.

As a government agency service delivery system, the conservation district system has been one of the most efficient units at delivering programs, Seif said.

He said the system and the achievements are reason for residents of Pennsylvania, and Lebanon County especially, to be proud.

Seif said that Gov. Tom Ridge has supported and has demonstrated a commitment to continuing to support the conservation district system and state agricultural industry, especially as evidenced in budgetary support this year with local districts receiving long-needed funding increases.

Seif said the 1999 state budget includes major increases in support for agriculture and DEP and was made possible "with a great deal of help from Sen. Brightbill."

The environmental protection secretary said the intent is to ensure more and more state and federal dollars are directed to local district levels, though "... not with more instructions."

The LCCD is a leader among the state's 66 districts, Seif said, and he reviewed the long list of LCCD program involvements and achievements accomplished in its 50 years.

He also made note of the changing tools now being used that were not conceived of, much less considered, 50 years ago.

One of the most important environmental achievements has been the Industrial Site Recycling Act, commonly referred to as the Brownfields Recycling Law, he said, noting that it was authored and sponsored by state Sen. Brightbill, when Brightbill served as majority chairman of the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee.

That legislation provides incentives to reuse older, abandoned industrial sites tainted with hazardous materials, instead of having industry select "greenfields," otherwise known as agricultural lands, for siting of new construtions.

At the same time that was done, legislation was made into law which divided the former Department of Environmental Resources into two distinct state agencies — the state DEP and the state Department of Conservation and Natural Resources.

These laws were some of the first created under Gov. Ridge's administration of state government.

Seif said that, since the inception of the law, "450 sites that had been written off as too dirty to worry about, were brought back into productive use.

"If you want to protect a cornfield," he said, "find a place ... were you have industrial taint and we'll make use of it (as an alternative)," Seif said.

He also explained the "new" environmental agency philosophy of working to makes efforts work, which means helping businesses comply with the concerns of environmental laws, rather than merely bashing businesses that are found out of compliance.

"Years ago, DER was a cop with a rule book and a billy club," he said.

With DEP, "the billy club is still there, but I don't like to use it," Seif said. "There are other tools."

Seif closed with a message from Gov. Ridge, who Seif noted, was at that very moment in Vietnam with the Philadelphia Symphony on a peace and trade mission.

Vietnam was a place where Ridge fought as a soldier during the 1960s, and the now completed trip was the first visit of the Philadelphia musical group to Vietnam.

Ridge's visit to Vietnam provided some context for how things change over time, according to Seif.

"Change is always with us, and you've (those with the conservation district, etc.) mastered it well."

In his greetings to the Lebanon County Conservation District, Gov. Ridge stated, "Since your inception in 1949, the District has conceived and managed effective water quality, nutrient management, farmland preservation, soil conservation, erosion and pollution control, wildlife and forest management, and recreation programs for the citizens and visitors to Lebanon County.

"On the forefront of ever-changing environmental conditions, these instrumental programs have shifted to adapt to the changing needs, populations and resources of the Lebanon County community.

Lebanon County

"... The District embodies the spirit of community that founded and continues to guide this commonwealth by promoting environmental education, awareness, conservation and recreation for the Lebanon County community.

"As an example of Pennsylvania achievement, we salute the District's dedication to the needs and preservation of our environment as we appreciate the belief that our own sanctity as a community depends on the health and happiness of our Earth."

Commissioner Litz then introduced Sen. Brightbill, and told of Brightbill's demonstrations of commitment to Lebanon County conservation efforts, the community, and his leadership in representing the county as a state senator.

Sen. Brightbill said he has been committed to helping conservation efforts, because he is committed to serving people who work together to solve problems.

Brightbill congratulated the LCCD on its anniversary, and commended them on the fact that it has been led by a dedicated group of volunteers who have spent many years working with the conservation district.

He especially recognized the role of the agricultural community in this effort, which he noted has continued to be supportive of sound environmental programs even though, at times, it has been at the agriculture community's expense.

He also praised the work of LCCD employees, and said they have been doing an outstanding job over the years in establishing a professional, cooperative and trusting relationship with the community.

According to Sen. Brightbill, in his service as a senator, as is his role as a sounding board for the community, he has received numerous complaints from constituents about many different governmental and social issues, and about certain agencies and officials. That is expected in the job of representing a diverse constituency, he said.

He noted that at times complaints have not been issues appropriate for action by a state senator, though he and his staff have always attempted to help direct individuals to the appropriate source to find resolution of problems.

(As has been observed by probably all elected representatives, all members of a constituency are not always aware of the different levels of government and the divisions of responsbility and authority between local, county, state, and federal governments).

He said that as a way to illustrate the volume of complaints he has received from constituents about all forms of government, and to provide context for a way to assess the community attitude toward the LCCD.

"In over 16.5 years, I have received virtually no complaints (about the LCCD). This is a reflection of the dedication of people like (District Manager) Charles Wertz and the staff."

He said the LCCD is a model for other counties and that Lebanon County has been fortunate to have attracted such people.

He also made a point of telling the audience that, prior to serving as secretary of DEP, it was private citizen James Seif who was very involved with helping develop the Brownfields legislation, and who worked with Brightbill in getting it done.

Brightbill said Seif's dedication to finding solutions to environmental problems continued after he left private life and became appointed by Gov. Ridge to head the new Department of Environmental Protection.

"It was Secretary Seif," Brightbill said, "who then worked with Gov. Ridge in a bipartisan way" to get the law passed.

"And it was Secretary Seif who has administered the program in such a way as to accomplish the objectives," Brightbill said.

(Brightbill had to leave the celebration a little early to serve as honorary chairman and to participate in a local, 24-hour, Walk-for-Life fundraising event.)

In other action, Winstead Burdette, an assistant state conservationist for the Pennsylvania office of the USDA NRCS, with an office at the Lebanon Agricultural Center, presented a certificate of appreciation to Calvin Miller, chairman of the LCCD board of directors.

Burdette was representing state Conservationist Janet Oertly. He said, "Over the years, NRCS always had a special relationship with the conservation district."

He said the early efforts of individuals, "... such as George Wolff and Donald Bollinger, and many other dedicated conservationists, made the district grow."

Bollinger was presented with a certificate of appreciation for service, commending his 35 years of service, and Burdette made special mention that when Bollinger was first named to the county board, he was the youngest in the state to ever serve in such a capacity.

(Bollinger, who has sold his farm near Klienfeltersville, has announced his intention to step down at the end of his current term this year. He is no longer an active farmer, and he can no longer represent farmers in his service to the board. According to LCCD Manager Wertz, the district is seeking someone from the farming community interested in serving. The county commissioners appoint members. Those interested in having their name submitted for consideration should call Wertz at (717) 272-3908, extension 111.)

Also thanked was George Wolff, who is serving as a non-voting associate director. Wolff has been a longtime advocate of responsible land use, agrarian practices, and sound governmental support of agriculture and agricultural research. Outside of his role on the board of the Lebanon Conservation District, Wolff has been involved in numerous state, regional, local and federal agricultural issues.

Three representatives of the board of directors then gave short presentations on different aspects of the LCCD involvements.

Connie Hoffer said her involvement as a farmer-director has been personally beneficial. "I've found the experience has made me a better farmer," she said.

She reviewed some of the programs with which the district has been involved, such as the county farmland preservation program which the District board "saved ... from extinction in 1991 ...," cost-sharing and financial incentive programs designed to foster the use of environmental best management practices, nutrient management efforts, and involvement with the biosolids (sewage sludge) program.

Jeffrey Steckbeck, an engineer who serves as an urban director on the board, talked about the district's erosion and sedimentation programs and the gravel and dirt road program, which applies in Lebanon County mostly to the northern region.

Steckbeck also talked about the role of the LCCD in reviewing development plans for erosion and sedimentation BMP compliance, as well as bonding for road construction, and the more recent use of state-administered EPA-required National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System permits.

Overall, he noted that the local economy has seen a benefit from erosion and sedimentation activity, of about $2 million per year.

Also speaking was urban director Betty Conner, who has a doctorate in microbiology. In addition to the conservation district board, she has also been involved in helping to establish county environmental and open space projects.

She emphasized that the conservation district isn't just for agriculture, but for the entire community, for every earth moving activity and resident.

She reviewed a list of soil, water and wildlife conservation efforts, but said that it really means looking out for the health and general welfare of the people of the community.

"Environmental quality is linked to the heart of the community," she said.

Conner talked about the Governor's Growing Greener Initiative, that may help bring financial support to local communities for restoration of the environment. She said districts, such as LCCD, are committed to helping ensuring that the money received is well spent.

She also reviewed many of the activities of the LCCD, such as the Envirothon, educational programs for teachers, recreational efforts with a number of groups.

Conner also cited the fact that the LCCD has been an annual recipient of a national Groundwater

Guardian Program award, that recognizes 100 communities in the United States with outstanding programs to protect groundwater. The LCCD has been recognized each year since the program began in 1996. The results for 1999 have yet to be announced.

She also talked about working with different organizations, such as the Lebanon campus of the Harrisburg Area Community College (HACC), and the Greater Lebanon Refuse Authority (GLRA).

As an example of Lebanon County's heritage of proactive environmental action, the GLRA was begun in the 1950s with county approval. It was begun and was headed for years by the late Frank Meiser, who was able to work with the late DER Secretary Maurice Goddard to establish the Lebanon Landfill as the first in the East, if not the United States, to make and use limestone-based wetlands and plants to treat landfill leachate.

Meiser had said that it was Goddard who overruled the then agency chiefs at DER who were against allowing the GLRA to build experimental treatment wetlands, that Meiser said were based on researched examples in Germany.

The wetlands concept is essentially still in practice, though now the system has additional and more modern treatment facilities and practices to treat leachate.

District Manager Wertz, who is in his 15th year with the district, said the event went well.

"My over-riding thought for the purpose of the entire celebration was to say, 'Thank you,' to the Lebanon County community at large, and we feel we put on a quality forum to do that.

"We very much appreciate the efforts of Secretary Seif in supporting the efforts of the conservation districts, as well as Sen. Brightbill," Wertz said. "They both have been very supportive of conservation districts and the concept of district delivery of conservation programs to local communities."

Wertz said that during his 15-year tenure as manager, "The responsibilities have grown 100-fold ... in the local environmental effort.

"To exist as a conservation district and successfully run a district, you need to be able to adapt to constant change, and take advantage of all the opportunities and energies that you can find in the people and financial resources in the community."

Wertz said Lebanon County people have repeatedly demonstrated their understanding of the relationship between a healthy environment and a healthy community, despite the short-term goals that can enrich a few individuals at the long-term expense of the greater community.

That conflict — between allowing short-term interests and rewards to succeed at the long-term detriment of the area — is a continuing battle.

However, Wertz said the national problem of unbridled residential and commercial retail development causing social and environmental problems needs to be addressed by each community and its people.

"Lebanon County epitomizes the changing face of America with very abrupt interfaces between agriculture and residential growth, and the issues that those interfaces create," he said.

"Our director-approved and guided programs attempt to address the needs of those issues.

"Fortunately, we've been blessed to have had, and to continue to have, strong and talented volunteer leadership and staffing to help us meet these needs," he said.

"We approach the future as best we can, with the philosophy of living in harmony with our resources, in as sustainable a fashion as we possibly can."

F.O.4 April Weighted Price $12.04

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Acting Market Administrator David Z. Walker recently announced an April 1999 weighted average milk price of $12.04 per hundredweight.

The weighted average differential price was 30 cents per hundredweight and the producer nonfat milk solids (NFMS) price was 93 cents per pound.

The weighted average price was down $3.57 from March and was $2.23 lower than a year earlier. The producer NFMS price was up 16 cents from last April.

The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was 93.22 cents per pound for the month, up 15.95 cents from last year.

The gross value of April producer milk, adjusted to 3.5 percent butterfat was $71.4 million, compared to $80.5 million a year ago.

Mr. Walker said that producer receipts totaled 599.6 million pounds during April, an increase of 31.6 million pounds from last April and the average daily delivery of 3,963 pounds per producer decreased 172 pounds or 4.2 percent from a year earlier.

A total of 5,043 producers supplied Order 4 handlers during the month, an increase of 464 from a year ago.

Class I producer milk totaled 220.7 million pounds and was up 1.4 million pounds, or .6 percent, from last April. Class I milk accounted for 36.81 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, compared with 38.61 percent in April 1998.

The average NFMS test of producer milk was 8.71 percent, up from 8.70 percent the previous year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.70 percent, up from 3.66 percent in April 1998.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 185.3 million pounds during April, an increase of .2 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation to calendar composition.

Charolais Association Welcomes New Members

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Several producers from around the region have been accepted into membership of the American-International Charolais Association (AICA).

Ralph Medley, Kingsville, Md.; Terry L. Morris, New Windsor, Md.; and Clifford E. Morris, New Windsor, Md. have recently jointed the AICA.

The AICA is the most progressive purebred beef cattle association working with commercial cattle producers, according to Dr. Bill V. Able, executive vice president of the international organization, headquartered in Kansas City, Mo.

The AICA supports more than 5,500 active adult and junior members. The association maintains the pedigree, performance, and carcass information on individual animals for its members. These computerized records are used to calculate the most accurate and up-to-date EPDs to promote the use of Charolais genetics to all profit-minded purebred and commercial cattle producers.

Lebanon County Dairy Princess Coronation June 5

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Dairy Princess Coronation is set to be held 7:30 p.m., Saturday, June 5, at the Lebanon County Career and Technology Center (formerly the Lebanon Area Vo-Tech).

All are invited to attend the event during which contestants are selected by a panel of judges to represent and promote the dairy industry and its products for a year as either a dairy princess, dairy maid, or li'l miss dairy princess.

Refreshments are to be served following the selection and crowning of the 1999 court of county dairy royalty.

There are three announced contestants for dairy princess; three for dairy maid; and two for li'l miss.

All are expected to be able to serve in some capacity.

Dairy Princesses

In the running for dairy princess are Amy Burkhart, 19, of Myerstown; Amanda Martin, 17, of Lebanon; and Stacy Weidler, 16, of Palmyra.

Burkhart is the daughter of Paul and Kay Burkhart, and graduated in 1999 from Berks Technical Institute. She currently is a certified medical assistant and employed fulltime at Orthopedic Associates of Reading and Sports Medicine. She also works on Calvin and Suzie Miller's farm in Lickdale.

Graduated from ELCO High School, where she was a member of class council, of the Art Club and band front, she served county dairy promotion as a dairy maid in 1993. She also exhibited at the Lebanon Area Fair.

Also while in high school, she was a WCTU speech contest winner, a member of the ELCO 4-H dairy club, J&M 4-H Variety Club, dairy bowl, and the Junior Holstein Club.

She is involved with children Bible school camp, church choir, and was selected by the Northeastern Jurisdictional Council on Youth Ministries to participate in a trip to Zimbabwe, Africa.

She enjoys hiking, swimming, riding bicycles, horseback riding, and watching monster trucks, demolition derbies and rodeos.

Amanda Martin is the daughter of Eugene and Kathy Martin, owners of the 163-acre Promise-Lane Holsteins, along Colebrook Road in Lebanon.

The Martins milk 80 cows and Amanda owns 13 dairy animals.

She is to be a senior at Cedar Crest High School, where she is involved in field hockey. She also studies landscaping and floral design at the Lebanon Career and Technology Center.

Currently vice president of FFA chapter, and secretary of county FFA, she serves as vice president of the county Junior Holstein Club, president of the NoSoAnn 4-H Dairy Club, and she exhibits Holsteins at the Lebanon Area Fair.

In addition, Amanda enjoys playing volleyball, line dancing, horseback riding, visiting the shore, showing at fairs, and working with cows.

Stacy Weidler is the daughter of Carl and Kathy Weidler of Palmyra, who farm 300 acres of corn, soybean, wheat and alfalfa, and milk 72 Holsteins, of which Stacy owns one.

Weidler is to be a senior at Palmyra Area High School, where she is involved in spring track and field competitions. She is also involved in the county 4-H Beef Club, and she volunteers with the Lawn Fire Company.

Stacy Weidler

Dairy Maids

Contestants to serve as Lebanon County dairy maids include Hannah Bomgardner, 16, of Lebanon; Kathryn Buck, 14, of Annville; and Sarah Krall, 15, of Lebanon.

In application, each is to state why they want to be a dairy maid.

Hannah Bomgardner is the daughter of Harvey and Kathy Bomgardner, who own and operate a dairy farm along Tunnel Hill Road, where Hannah also owns several dairy animals.

She is to be in 10th grade in the fall, and her school activities include chorus, concert choir, honor roll, and orchestra.

She is also a member of the

Amy Burkhart

NoSoAnn 4-H Dairy Club, Cedar Crest FFA chapter, and her church youth group.

Kathryn Buck is the daughter of Harry and Annette Buck, who dairy farm along Killinger Road in Annville, where they raise seeing eye dogs.

She is to be starting high school in the fall, and has been active in band, volleyball, playing in an area soccer league, and in the Extra Special Seeing-Eye Puppy Club.

She said she wants to be a dairy maid because, "I enjoy milk and would like other people to like milk too. It is something I would enjoy doing."

Sarah Krall, daughter of Rick and Linda Krall of Lebanon, owns 10 dairy animals kept on her uncle's dairy farm.

Amanda Martin

Set to enter 10th grade in the fall, Krall has been active in school chorus, FFA, Odyssey of the Mind, and students for Christ.

She is also a member of Cedar Crest 4-H Dairy Club, 4-H Friends, and her church youth group.

Li'l Miss Dairy Princess

The two contestants for li'l miss dairy princess are Littia Smith, 4, of Lebanon; and Sarah Smith, 7, of Lebanon.

Littia Smith is the daughter of Scott and Sara Smith, who helps with her mother on her uncle's dairy farm.

Sarah Smith is the daughter of Earl and Marilyn Smith, and helps at her parents' owned and operated dairy farm in rural route Lebanon.

National Dairy Shrine To Celebrate 50th Anniversary

1-3 p.m. guests will have time to explore NDS' extension collection of dairy artifacts and mememtos, visit portrait galleries, and meet new members while renewing acquaintances. You surely won't want to miss this historical event.

A special dairy calf will make a grand entrance breaking through a 50th Anniversary banner "kick starting" the splendid celebration.

National Dairy Shrine brings together dairy producers, scientists, students, educators, marketers and others who share a desire to preserve our dairy heritage and keep the industry strong.

Founded in 1949 by a small group of visionary dairy leaders, National Dairy Shrine now has over 15,000 members encompassing virtually every facet of the industry.

NDS helps our industry by annually providing more than $20,000 in awards and scholarships for college students, dairy producers and industry leaders. Funds for these scholarships come from membership fees, interest on a $1 million endowment fund, and voluntary contributions. National Dairy Shrine also provides support for World Dairy Expo and National 4-H Dairy Conference.

Discover the rich heritage of the dairy industry at the Golden Anniversary Celebration of National Dairy Shrine in the heart of America's Dairyland-Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin.

National Dairy Shrine Visitor's Center is located on U.S. Highway 12 East (Whitewater Ave.) in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, adjacent to the Hoard Historical Museum. Watch for signs as you enter Fort Atkinson.

Higher Somatic Cell Standards Coming Pa.DHIA Testing, Reports Can Help

DAVE SLUSSER
Manager, Pa.DHIA

STATE COLLEGE (Dauphin Co.) — As we approach the new millennium, food safety, or in our case milk safety and quality from the cow to the dairy case, will be a watchword.

Even though we have the cleanest milk in the world, the pressure will always be on.

According to Jim Dickrell, president of the National Mastitis Council (NMC), his organization is moving forward to lower the somatic cell count (SCC) regulatory limit from 750,000 to 400,000 cells per milliliter.

The NMC recommends the regulatory limits be lowered to 600,000 SCC by Jan. 1, 2001; 500,000 SCC by June 1, 2002; and 400,000 SCC by Jan. 1, 2003.

They also recommend the limits be calculated using a geometric mean (based on 12 tests over three months) rather than using the simple arithmetic average.

While Pa.DHIA members don't see the lowering of the legal limit to 400,000 cells/ml as a major concern, their SCC average is well below 400,000.

Those with herds not on test, or managers not using their DHIA information, may be in for problems.

Lowering your SCC well below 400,000 has major benefits beyond ensuring you of a market for your milk. Low SCC count cows produsce more milk, demand higher component prices, and are healthier.

By maintaining a SCC count between 100,000 and 300,000, research and history have proven you will generate more income by increased production and higher premium payments.

The cost of the Pa.DHIA test, of treating cows and of discarded milk, will be returned two to six times, depending on your level of infection.

Subclinical mastitis will not show up on the strip-cap or the milk strainer, but will lower your production and rob you of quality premiums and component prices. One or two high count cows could contaminate an entire tank of milk and that situation will get worse as we approach a legal limit of 400,000 cells/ml.

The Pa.DHIA SCC report will pinpoint the problem cows each month and calculate your losses from each cow.

Realizing that a farm manager's time is very short this time of year, be sure to have someone appraise your SCC Report on your behalf, if you cannot.

You are talking about thousands of dollars in losses per year by not paying attention to each cow in your herd. No matter what your herd size is, it all comes down to one cow at a time.

Recommended steps to keep your SCC under control are:

1. Maintain your milking equipment properly by checking the vacuum levels at each milking and by having an expert check your system at least twice per year.

2. Take your milking procedures seriously. Your best people should be milking your cows. Use individual towels, pre-dip and post-dip, and get the milkers on and off in time. I recommend that all your milkers attend a milking school.

3. Test your cows with Pa.DHIA and use this information to treat, culture, and dry treat high cows. Cows that do not respond to treatment should be beefed.

4. Have your veterinarian review your Pa.DHIA information each month during your herd health check, and act on this information.

By following these steps, you will improve your income, assure yourself of a market for your milk, and make a major contribution to food safety from the cow to the dairy case.

State, Federal Governments Partner With PennAg

toward a mutual goal of minimizing any chances for S.E. illness from Pennsylvania eggs.

According to the agreement, "The purpose of this partnership agreement is to provide reasonable assurance to consumers that Pennsylvania eggs are a minimal risk to cause food-borne disease caused by Salmonella Enteritidis."

It states that the agreement specifies specifics that have been agreed to be critical to achieving that goal.

The details are yet to be worked out, and that fact is mentioned prominently, as is the intention that each agency will do it utmost to support and defend the agreement.

The memorandum specifies that each of the parties entering the agreement are to assign a specific person and a backup person to act as the contact liaison/coordinator for the purposes of the agreement. Phone numbers and other contact information are to be shared.

Further, the agreements sets that at least annual meetings are to be held to share information and to evaluate the effectiveness of the agreement.

Specifically in the agreement, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, Philadelphi District and Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition has agreed to three areas of responsibility:

1. It will provide guidance and techincal support to the partnership.

2. It will provide legal information regarding the Freedom of Information concerning individual components of the agreement.

3. It will conduct trace-back, investigation and testing activities.

Under the last responsibility, the FDA was noted to have legal authority for trace-backs to farm of origin, and on-farm investigation and testing of all egg-associated SE outbreaks of cases involving interstate commerce.

The agreement also specifies the responsibility for the federal agency to inform Pennsylvania of SE outbreaks that may be associated with Pennsylvania eggs and to provide related test results.

It details that the FDA acknowledges the 1996 agreements between the PDA, the state Department of Health and the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, which has since been merged into PennAg Industries Association. It also details actions and modifications of the 1996 agreement which are to be taken.

The state Department of Health is to "... conduct epidemiological investigations of egg-associated food-borne illness involving Pennsylvania residents to determine the probable source of the causative agent."

It is also to "... notify FDA and PDA contacts when it determines or has been informed that an SE outbreak has occurred and there is potential association with Pennsylvania eggs shipped intra or interstate."

In addition to other legal details, the state Department of Health is to make all lab and environmental testing and egg culture results it conducts or receives available to the FDA.

The state Department of Agriculture is to do trace-backs when the Department of Health or the FDA becomes aware of an outbreak of SE that has a potential assoication with Pennsylvania eggs.

PennAg is to "orchestrate industry leadership and participation in the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP) via the PEQAP Oversight and Planning Committee."

PennAg is to also provide technical and professional counsel to PEQAP including training and educational services.

PennAg has agreed to promote industry participation in PEQAP, as well as to keep a regular line of communication with PDA and the Department of Health on ways to manage the risk of SE outbreaks in eggs.

Selling Meeting June 21

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Do you want to earn $800 or more per day selling your farm products?

That's what almost half of the growers participating in the Philadelphia Farmers' Market Trust earned each market day during the peak growing season last year.

To learn more about how to expand your marketing potential, Pennsylvania Farm Link, Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Farmers' Market Trust are conducting a "Farmer's Market" meeting from 7-9 p.m. on June 21 at the Berks County Extension Office in Leesport.

John Berry from Penn State Cooperative Extension will talk about the changing consumer demands in fresh market produce and the growing interest in farmers markets. He will outline basic marketing principles and explain why consumers are interested in supporting local agriculture.

Farmers' Market Trust Director of Community Markets Bob Pierson will talk about quantities of produce, planting strategies, crops to grow, and the desire for value-added products.

Finally, Marion Bowlan will describe Pennsylvania Farm Link services including the marketing/entrepreneurial development meetings, farm succession workshops, the new and beginning farmer workshop, and the database linking service planned for this year.

Pre-registration for this free meeting is requested and can be done by calling Farm Link at 717-260-0400 by June 18.

Mid-Atlantic Region Hosts National Corriedale Sale

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the first time, the mid-Atlantic region will host the National Corriedale Sale, along with the National Corriedale Junior Show, Thursday through Saturday, July 8 to 10, here at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex, in conjunction with the Keystone Stud Ram and Ewe Sale.

Corriedales are white-faced sheep raised both for their meat and wool. They originated in New Zealand in the 1860s as a cross between Merinos and English Lincoln longwools, and are now the second most numerous breed worldwide. Hardy and productive, they are known for their mothering ability, their heavy, valuable fleeces, and their high-quality carcasses.

The first event scheduled is the National Junior Show on Thursday, July 8 at 12:30 p.m., with Donna Waddington of Ukiah, California, as judge. On July 9 at 8 a.m., Tom Crane of Santa Rosa, California, will judge the National Corriedale Show. The National Corriedale Sale will take place on July 10 at 9 a.m.

Those who attend will have the opportunity to meet sheep breeders and youth from all over the country. The schedule includes social events such as a Junior Association picnic.

For lodging information and a more complete calendar of events, contact Barbara Ruppert, 1999 National Corriedale Sale Public Relations Committee, at (717) 642-6635.

For the Best of Times

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times" begins the great literary novel, "A Tale of Two Cities" by Charles Dickens.

It's been said that fact is stranger than fiction.

With today's economic boom in America, indeed it would seem that these are the best of times. Unemployment figures are at a 30-year low. Welfare reform is focusing efforts on employability and childcare provision for recipients with numbers of eligible people dropping daily as they obtain jobs. The Dow Jones Industrial Average has closed above 10,700 just days after toying with 10,000 and declining. Millions of Americans have billions of dollars invested for their retirements through 401k and 403b plans. Despite these promising numbers, economically it is one of the worst times for many American families.

According to the "Wall Street Journal," nearly 70 percent of all consumers live from paycheck to paycheck. "Consumer Reports Money Book" says the typical household has $38,000 in debt and that total consumer debt has almost tripled since 1980; from $1.3 trillion to more than $3.3 trillion. Nearly half of all Americans (46%) have less than $10,000 saved for their retirement, according to Miles to Go: A Status Report on Americans' Plans for Retirement, a new public opinion study released by Public Agenda. In 1997 Americans paid $65 billion on credit card interest. 1997 found 1.35 million families declaring bankruptcy–8 times the rate during the Great Depression. In Pennsylvania for the twelve month period ending September 30, 1998, 44,180 families declared insolvency, a 13.28% increase over the previous year.

Confused?

How is it that with phenomenally good economic conditions, many families are struggling and losing economic battles? Human beings are strange creatures. Research shows that when times are good, people spend more. When there's a downturn in the economy, savings increase. With several years of economic success, Americans lived up to their "consumer" image, spending $1.10 for every $1 earned. Eventually, deficit spending catches up with consumers; either through bankruptcy or through changed habits.

One way to change habits is through education. "Money 2000" is a Cooperative Extension program designed to help increase net worth significantly by teaching better spending and saving habits. The brainchild of Barbara O'Neill of Rutgers University, "Money 2000" was introduced to Pennsylvanians in May 1998. To date more than 500 Pennsylvania families are enrolled with a savings goal of $934,235 and a debt reduction goal of $779,489. If these families are successful, that's a grand total of nearly 1.75 million dollars. Throughout the state, Extension Agents are encouraging families to enroll in this educational program.

To enroll as a "Money 2000" household, contact the nearest Penn State Cooperative Extension Office, generally listed in the blue pages of your phone book, under county government. If your county is not participating, ask to be referred to one that is "Money 2000" participants receive encouragement and assistance in their efforts to increase their financial well-being. Some "Money 2000" participants achieve their financial goal by increasing savings, others reduce debt Lots of people do both!

"Money 2000" works because it is personalized. The immediate focus is on current financial situation and setting achievable financial goals. The program provides numerous useful tools that help get people from where they are to where the want to be

"Money 2000" is comprehensive. It has been developed to reach different types of people in a number of ways. The program provides information and educational support families need as they achieve financial goals. In Pennsylvania, "Money 2000" offers a free quarterly newsletter as well as information on upcoming workshops, seminars, and learn-at-home materials. Participants set a savings and/or debt reduction goal they hope to achieve by the end of the year 2000. Every six months, a county extension office contacts them to check on their progress and learn what additional help participants need to achieve their goals

Internet devotees will be pleased to learn that the http://www money2000 org is the website for the national education program It contains numerous weblinks and helpful worksheets, some are even interactive Don't let 1999 be "the worst of times" for your family Join "Money 2000" today to learn how you can be well on your way to the "best of times" in 2000!

The fragrant peony blooms always stir the connection....

It began as a day to remember those who gave their lives that we might live in freedom and peace.

Memorial Day

A day to fly the flag A day to enjoy bands blasting a rousing musical salute and to applaud somber-eyed veterans as they pass by parade audiences in review And a day to cut fresh peonies from old-fashioned, backyard perennial beds to reverently place on the tombstones of departed loved ones A day with special focus on those who deaths were for our national defense

Memorial Day. A day to remember

But how many of us do?

The calendar hanging here next to our office computer sums up where we are, celebration wise, this half-century past the end of the second Great War The fine print for May 30 notes it as "traditional" Memorial Day The fine print for May 31 notes it as "observed" Memorial Day

Fiddling with tradition for convenient, three-day weekend sake

For much of this free country, what started as a "traditional" patriotic remembrance has become the "observed" roll-out of summer The first weekend at the beach or the mountain retreat, the opening of swimming pools, the first family cookouts in the backyard. A long weekend to shop at the specials offered by our endless array of consumer retail centers

Or for the many of us whose jobs don't change on holidays, another day to serve customers, direct traffic fight fires, tend to the sick. . to milk cows, put more hay away, finish planting soybeans.

There's certainly nothing wrong with relaxing with friends and family, with enjoying the outdoors, with welcoming the warmth and freshness of summertime, with continuing a daily routine?

Just so long as we don't forget

Don't forget the thousands who died in muddy foxholes in a foreign land. Don't forget those who drowned before they made it to the beaches of Normandy. Don't forget those whose remains are forever interred beneath the sheltered waters of Pearl Harbor. Don't forget what they did so we - in our freedom - can picnic and party and pay up at the malls' cash registers

Those National Guard members from our community called up to do communications support in the Kosovo conflict are remembering. Pilots manning the controls of the Apache helicopters doing surveillance over Eastern Europe are remembering My cousin's son, a young friend's brother, and all your loved ones serving us, wherever, in whatever jobs, around the world, in the military. are surely remembering.

Frustrated with our ongoing "mini-wars" around the globe, angered and perplexed with our domestic battles of guns and violence and crime, we take for granted the blessings which allow us to casually forget the ultimate sacrifice paid by our country's heroic defenders. We take for granted our (by many standards) luxurious way of living, our shining dollar, our thriving economy, our abundant, varied and inexpensive food supply, our comfortable homes, our education system, our cheap transportation, our freedom to worship, assemble, protest, and yes, to picnic, play and shop on patriotic holidays.

Pick a peony, if you can find one. Inhale its delicate fragrance. And remember.

Fly your flag. And remember.

Come to think of it, we have enough blessings to justify celebrating Memorial Day on BOTH days.

Group To Promote Dairy Industry In Juniata County

MIFFLINTOWN (Juniata Co.) — The Juniata County Dairy Promotion Pageant was held Sunday, May 2, at the Walker Grange Hall. Many memories were shared by both girls, giving each in attendance a bird's eye view of their busy year.

This year's pageant was dedicated to Melissa Imes (Rardin), 1989/90 Juniata County Dairy Princess who passed away recently after a brief illness. A rose was placed on the stage in her memory.

Juniata County Dairy Promotions will be performed by a group of dairy ambassadors, dairy maids, and dairy misses, including Jessica Bailor and Bobbi Jo Dressler who will serve as dairy ambassadors.

Booking arrangements for dairy promotions should be made by contacting Trudy Wagner at (717) 436-8184.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

In this world of hurry and bustle, I am most relaxed and happy when I'm at home with my flowers and vegetable garden. But you would never know that by the past week's activities.

My husband had a birthday and so I treated him to a meal at a restaurant. The next day we attended a funeral of a friend and then babysat the grandchildren in the afternoon. They enjoyed making chains of dandelion stems.

Our church sponsored an organ concert by Diane Bish, "First Lady of the Organ." The new 78-rank Wicks Pipe organ certainly has volume but the piece that I enjoyed most was called "Five Flute Clocks" by Joseph Haydn and was a quiet little tune. One lady told me that she could have stayed at home and still heard the concert — she lives a mile away from the church.

In the week's activities was a trip to our grandson's school as he will be a kindergartner next fall. Many little games were planned for their last day such as throw a bean bag through a hole, string little prtezels on yarn, and toss a plastic ring. After they had their faces painted, they got a hay or rather a straw ride with a big tractor.

As I enjoy the theater more than my husband, we seldom go to the theater. However, on Saturday night my husband and I saw "Lost in Yonkers" a play by Neil Simon. This comedy and drama was well attended and we were surprised by the number of people, that we knew, who were there. Some folks we had not seen for years.

I suppose it is good to get away from home once in a while and see what is happening in the world around us. But for the most part, I am satisfied to live and work at home.

Cap Season With 'Berry' Good Recipes

GREAT GRANMOTHER YOUNG'S STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

1½ cups flour
2 tablespoon butter
2 teaspoons baking powder
Dash salt
½ cup sugar
½ cup milk
1 egg

Mix flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt together. Stir in butter. Mix milk and egg together. Pour liquid into dry mixture. Mix well. Pour into greased 9-inch round cake pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove from oven. Cut a slice and put into a bowl. Cover with fresh strawberries and top with milk.

This is one of my favorite spring time recipes. The recipe came from my great grandmother Young. My family usually doubles the recipe and we make a meal of strawberry shortcake. Enjoy!

Rebecca Cornman
Cumberland Co. Dairy Princess

STRAWBERRY PIE

Fresh, ripe strawberries, whole, halved or sliced
¾ cup water
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch
½ small package strawberry Jell-O
Prepared pie crust

Wash strawberries and allow to dry before slicing. I usually prefer to halve the berries. Fill crust with berries. I prefer graham cracker crust.

Stir together water, sugar, and corn starch over medium heat until thickened. Add half a package strawberry Jell-O. Mix thoroughly and pour over strawberries. Chill. Great topped with whipped cream.

WACKY WAFFLE STACKS

3 round toasted waffles
¼ cup plain or strawberry-flavored soft cream cheese
1½ tablespoons strawberry preserves
6 strawberries, sliced
4 whole strawberries, garnish

Toast waffles according to package directions. Place one waffle on plate. Spread with 2 tablespoons cream cheese and half of preserves. Arrange half of sliced fruit on top. Top with another waffle; repeat layers with remaining ingredients. Top with remaining waffle. Cut waffle stack into quarters. Garnish each quarter with a whole strawberry. Serve immediately.

BRUNCH CREPES WITH SUZETTE SAUCE

Crepes:
2 cups nonfat milk
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 egg whites
1 egg
1 tablespoon honey
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
⅛ teaspoon salt
No-stick cooking spray

Sauce:
½ cup honey
½ cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons grated orange peel
1½ teaspoons freshly grated lemon peel
1½ teaspoons corn starch
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups plain nonfat or lowfat yogurt
1½ cups sliced strawberries

To make sauce: In medium saucepan, combine honey, orange juice, lemon juice, orange peel, lemon peel, and corn starch; whisk to blend. Bring mixture to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring occasionally. Cook and stir 2 to 3 minutes or until mixture thickens. Remove from heat; stir in butter. Let cool while preparing crepes.

To make crepes: In blender container, combine all ingredients; process until smooth. Spray 8-inch nonstick skillet lightly with cooking spray. Heat over medium-high heat until hot. For each crepe, spoon ¼ cup batter into hot skillet, tilting and rotating skillet until batter covers bottom evenly. Cook until edges begin to brown. Turn crepe; cook until lightly browned. Remove crepes to plate to cool. To serve, press one crepe into each of six ramekins or small bowls to form a cup. Fill each cup with ⅓ cup yogurt; top each with ¼ cup strawberries and 2 to 3 tablespoons sauce. Place remaining 6 crepes in airtight container and refrigerate for up to 3 days or freeze up to one month.

FRUIT FROSTEA

1 cup boiling water
3 tea bags
¼ cup sugar or honey
1 pint strawberries, hulled
1 banana, cut into chunks
3 cups ice cubes

In teapot, pour boiling water over tea bags; cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags, cool slightly.

In blender, combine tea, sugar, strawberries, and banana. Add ice cubes, one at a time, and process until frosty. Serve immediately.

Wacky Waffle Stacks is a delightfully attractive way to use in-season berries.

Chocolate-flavor syrup

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Grease cookie sheet. Heat water and butter to boiling in 2-quart saucepan. Stir in baking mix; reduce heat to low. Stir vigorously over low heat about one minute or until mixture forms a ball; remove from heat. Beat in eggs, all at once; continue beating until smooth. Drop dough by 12 heaping tablespoons onto cookie sheet. Bake 15-20 minutes or until puffed and deep golden brown. Immediately cut small slit in top of each puff to allow steam to escape; cool completely.

Cut off top half of each puff, and pull out any strands of soft dough. Beat pudding mix (dry) and whipping cream with wire whisk or hand beater until thickened (mixture will not be smooth). Fill each bottom half puffs with about ⅓ cup mousse; arange 3 or 4 strawberry slices, with points overhanging edges on mousse. Replace tops of puffs; drizzle with syrup. Refrigerate any remaining filled puffs. 12 puffs.

STRAWBERRY YOGURT TORTE

1 package white cake mix
¾ cup water
⅓ cup vegetable oil
3 egg whites
6-ounce container strawberry yogurt
2 tubs white ready-to-spread frosting
20 fresh strawberries, cut into ¼-inch slices

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour jelly-roll pan. Beat together dry cake mix, water, oil, egg whites and yogurt in large bowl on low speed 30 seconds. Beat on medium speed 2 minutes. Pour into pan. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool completely on wire rack.

Cut cake crosswise into thirds. For easier frosting, freeze cake thirds uncovered one hour. Place one third on serving plate; spread with ½ cup frosting. Arrange half the strawberry slices on frosted layer. Repeat with another third cake, ½ cup frosting, and remaining strawberries. Top with remaining third cake. Frost side with thin coat frosting to seal crumbs; then frost side and top. Cover loosely and refrigerate until chilled. Garnish with berries and mint leaves. Refrigerate any remaining torte. 20 servings.

FUDGEY FRUIT PIZZA

½ cup vegetable oil spread
¾ cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract, divided
½ cup plus 1 tablespoon cocoa powder, divided
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup chocolate syrup, divided
8-ounce package nonfat cream cheese
1 cup powdered sugar
2 cups sliced fresh strawberries
¼ cup strawberry syrup

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Lightly grease 12-inch pizza pan.

Beat vegetable oil spread, granulated sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla until creamy. Add ½ cup cocoa; beat well. Gradually add flour and ¼ cup chocolate syrup, beating until well combined. Press dough evenly into prepared pan, forming cookie crust. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until set. Cool completely.

Prepare filling by combining cream cheese, powdered sugar, remaining 1 tablespoon cocoa and remaining 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Spread over crust to within 1-inch of edge. Cover; refrigerate until cold, about 1 hour.

Just before serving, place sliced strawberries on top; drizzle with remaining ¼ cup chocolate syrup and strawberry syrup. Cut into slices; serve immediately. 12 servings.

For Better Bones, Eat Green Vegetables

If you're drinking your milk, and getting some Vitamin D for stronger bones, research shows there is one more thing you need to do, and that is eat vegetables high in Vitamin K. Harvard researchers in collaboration with Tufts University have found that women who every day consumed at least 109 micrograms of Vitamin K (see chart below) were 30% less likely to suffers a hip fracture over a 10 year period, than those who took less.

Vitamin K is thought to help keep bones strong by allowing a specific bone protein, osteocalcin, to undergo a chemical alteration that lets it take its place in the body's skeletal structure. Calcium and Vitamin D are still crucial, of course, but without vitamin K-assisted change, osteocalcin cannot serve its function in the bone, and appears to cause significant skeletal weakening.

The Current Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for Vitamin K is 65 micrograms for women and 80 micrograms for men. But the researchers say that perhaps the RDA should be raised in light of the amount of vitamin K that appears necessary for bone health. Evidence so far makes it reasonable for people to try to eat at least one daily serving of dark green vegetables-the richest source of vitamin K.

Harvard University's Nurses Health study suggests taht women need at least 109 milligrams of vitamin K daily to reduce the risk of hip fractures. Lettuce, particularly dark green varieties such as Romaine are good sources. Even better sources:

1/2 c. serving	Vitamin K (micrograms)
Collard greens	440
Spinach	360
Brussels Sprouts	235

Taking Calcium

Calcium Carbonate the most widely available form of calcium (found in Tums and other popular supplements) is absorbed more consistently with meals. But, the most important thing to remember especially for those following a high dose calcium regimen is to divide the doses. If you're taking 1000-1200 milligrams of calcium a day, you should divide the dose in half, one in the morning and one in the evening, to get the best absorption. The body may not be able to absorb larger doses all at once.

Also, it is a good idea to choose a calcium supplement that contains vitamin D, without which calcium cannot be efficiently absorbed. People who live in the northern latitudes (like Boston and Chicago) don't get enough sun and are at greater risk for not getting the 200 to 600 international units of vitamin D they need each day.

It should also be noted a significant portion of the elderly propulation cannot absorb some kinds of calcium supplements unless they take them at mealtime. These people have a condition called atrophic gastritis in which they don't secrete enough stomach acid between meals to break down the calcium carbonate.

Most people don't know whether they have atrophic gastritis – it tends to go undiagnosed, but once you get past 60 it doesn't hurt to play it safe and assume you do.

Students Hear About Ducks, Chickens, Turkeys, Eggs

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Anything you want to know about chickens, ducks, turkeys, and eggs?

Sarah Woodling is the person to ask. The 17-year-old is the Pennsylvania State Poultry Ambassador. It's her job to tell others about the benefits of eating poultry and eggs.

For the past several months, Sarah has been visiting many elementary schools to tell students about the importance of the poultry industry.

Sarah shows a video produced by the Lancaster County Poultry Association. She tells students how nutritious feed is needed to raise healthy chickens, turkeys, and ducks that produce good eggs. She tells students how eggs are processed and graded before appearing in supermarkets.

For several years, Sarah has been conducting scientific experiments in her home. She is trying to find a superior method to preserve eggs so that they last longer and do not spread any food-borne illnesses. For her work, she has received numerous awards and scholarships.

Sarah finds eggs intriguing. In fact, next year, she plans to study poultry technology and food science at Penn State University.

But you don't need to wait until you go to college to learn about eggs, chickens, ducks, and turkeys. You can visit farms, and ask about the process. You can read magazine articles and books about the industry.

Sarah hopes to inspire some students to be like her and conduct scientific experiments at home.

Recently Sarah visited students at Janus School in Mount Joy. This is a private school for children who have high scholastic abilities but have a learning disability.

Sarah told these students about the difference between broilers and layer chickens. Broilers are raised for meat, and layers are raised to produce eggs. She showed them the video about the poultry industry. To the delight of the students, Sarah also took in some baby chicks and ducks for the students to hold.

Perhaps you are not part of a school where Sarah has visited, but you can learn some facts about the poultry industry if you do the activities shown on this page.

Pennsylvania State Poultry Ambassador visits classrooms to tell students about eggs and poultry.

Pennsylvania State Poultry Ambassador Sarah Woodling explains how eggs hatch in an incubator.

John Farrel and Chris Osborne hold baby ducklings while Sarah talks about how ducklings hatch and grow up.

Vocabulary

1. Shell — The outside protective layer of the egg Most shells are white, but some shells may be brown or other colors depending upon the breed of hen Shell color does no affect the nutritional value, quality or flavor of eggs There are tiny pores or holes, in the shell These holes allow air and moisture to get inside the egg

2. Shell Membrane — Actually there are two thin membranes inside the shell These generally adhere, or stick to the inside of the shell when a raw egg is cracked open As well as the shell, this membrane covers and protects the developing embryo until hatching time

3. Air Cell — The air cell is found at the large end of an egg Look inside the shell of a raw egg the shell membrane traps the air cell against the shell As eggs age the air cell enlarges because moisture is escaping through the shell and is replaced by air This is why fresh eggs sink while older eggs float when put in water

4. Albumen — The clear white of an egg that makes up over half of the egg s weight This semi-solid material has a high water content A very fresh egg has lots of thick albumen and will remain firm Variations in storage temperature and aging can cause the albumen to thin The albumen provides the growing embryo with food and water

5. Chalaza (kuh-LAY-zee) — The two thick strands of albumen at each end of the yolk These strands anchor the yolk in the center of the egg to keep it from touching the shell They also serve as a rotating axis to keep the germ cell on the top of the yolk next to the heat of the hen s body Often the chalaza are more prominent in fresh high-quality eggs

6. Yolk — The yellow of the egg that comprises about one-third of the egg s weight Yolks can vary in color from light to dark yellow due to the hen s diet however all are equally nutritious The yolk is the first part of the egg that is formed inside the hen There is a membrane covering the yolk that is often broken when cracking an egg For the growing embryo the yolk provides food and protection The yolk includes the protoplasm from which the embryo develops

7. Germ (Blastoderm) — The white spot or portion of the yolk where an embryo can begin to develop if the egg has been fertilized and kept warm

8. U.S.D.A. — The United States Department of Agriculture, which determines the standards for grading eggs The most common grades are AA and A Eggs graded AA will have yolks and albumens that stand taller and firmer than those graded A However, both grades AA and A have the same nutritional value

7 TOPS RMEG _____

Questions Most Often Asked By Students

1. Can two chicks hatch from one egg?

Yes It is a rare occurrence When two chicks hatch from the same egg, the egg usually has two yolks The development of twin chicks from single-yoked eggs is very infrequent, and when it does occur, the single yolk has two blastoderms (fertilized germs) We have no knowledge of Siamese twin chicks ever being hatched

2. What is a double-yolked egg?

It is an egg that has two yolks in it Both yolks were ovulated (released) at or about the same time and enclosed in the same shell Many eggs with double yolks occur when young adult female chickens first start producing eggs Their egg-forming organs are not adjusted or not yet synchronized, so two yolks are released together Shortly after egg production starts, the chickens' bodies adjust, and for the most part, they then lay eggs with only one yolk But, there are some chickens which inherit the characteristic to lay double-yolked eggs and continue to do so throughout their life

3. If a female chicken is hatched with about 4,000 ova and lays only 240 to 250 eggs a year, what happens to the remainder of the ova?

Depending on the state of health and condition of the chicken, they can continue to exist in the hen's body ready to form a yolk or they can be absorbed by the hen's body

4. Can I hatch the eggs I buy at the store?

No The eggs in grocery stores are infertile and will not hatch

5. If a mother hen sits on a fertile egg, will it always hatch? If not, what does she do with it?

Not all fertile eggs will hatch even when incubated either by a broody hen or in an incubator Under some conditions they will contain weak or defective embryos. Hatchability is influenced by (1) age of eggs at setting, (2) conditions under which they were held before incubation, (3) parent stock, including its breeding potential, health and diet, and (4) conditions while the eggs are being incubated So, the fact that a hen is doing the incubating does not guarantee that a fertile egg will hatch If an egg or eggs do not hatch, the hen eventually leaves them and the nest She leaves because the hormone that caused her to go broody is no longer secreted, so she stops setting on the eggs In a way it could be said that nature has told her to quit the nest

6. How long can the mother hen be off the nest during the day? What will happen if she stays off too long?

A setting hen can be off the nest 15 to 20 minutes or a little longer at one time without harming the embryos, unless the weather is extremely cold If she remains off too long, the embryos will be chilled too much Then, some of the chicks may be weakened, and some of the embryos will die and not hatch

7. If an embryo dies during incubation, does it feel pain?

In most cases, no The embryo just sort of goes to sleep In the case of severe jolting, extreme heat or cold, or similar causes of death, the embryo might experience some discomfort

8. Why does the eye get so big; and why does it grow so fast?

We do not have the exact answer to this However, it is possible that both size of the eye and speed of its growth could be at least partially due to the eye being so very complex and so important This considerable time is needed to completely form and develop it

9. Why does the heart grow on the outside of the body at first?

We do not know why it does so It is known that the heart helps to circulate blood both in the embryo s circulatory system and in the membranes outside the embryo that carry food to the embryo as it develops

10. If you break open the shell, say on the 8th or 9th day, how long can the embryo live?

The length of time it will live varies with the conditions around it such as temperature It is not likely to live more than 5 to 10 minutes in most instances It is possible to remove the shell at the large end of the egg replace it with a plastic cap, continue to incubate the egg and the embryo can then live several days

11. Can you open the shell for the chick?

Yes, but is not recommended To do so is frequently painful to the chick Also the chick is usually weakened and may die

12. Can I find the egg tooth and keep it after it falls off?

No It just sort of "fades" or 'melts' away

13. If I find a bird egg, such as a Robin's, can I hatch it?

It is possible, but you should not because young birds like the Robin require the skilled care of its parents to survive People cannot provide the same kind of care The baby bird will most likely die from starvation cold or mismanagement

14. Can we hold the chicks as soon as they hatch?

Before the chicks are handled, the hatch should be completed and the chicks should be allowed to dry completely and fluff up

15. How can you tell if the chick is male or female?

Unless the males and females are different colors you cannot tell them apart without special training Trained chick sexors can tell the difference by (1) examining the chick's internal organs or (2) observing the difference in the length of the chick s wing feathers at about one day of age

16. Can I take the chicks home? If my uncle owns a farm? If I move to a farm?

No You should not take the chicks home unless your family or some relatives live on a farm and have the proper equipment and buildings and the knowledge to care for them appropriately

17. Are you going to kill the chicks when you take them from the class?

No A farmer will take them and care for them

18. How long after a chick hatches does it become an adult?

Those chickens raised for egg production need to develop for about five months Those raised for meat take longer — about six months

19. How long do chickens live?

Broilers reach market age in six to eight weeks On most commercial egg farms laying hens have completed their usefulness when they are 18 to 20 months old Records show that when chickens are allowed to live out their lives naturally many of them will live in the range of six to ten years Some claims have been made of some chickens living as long as 22 years

Cooperatives Challenged To Rekindle Passion

LOU ANN GOOD

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — It's more fun, more rewarding, and more profitable to feel passionate about farming, running a business, or working as an employee. But the challenges of everyday living and the pressures of time and money constraints often erode positive feelings.

To rekindle the passion, the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives conducted an Eastern Member's Relations Conference on May 19-21 at the Radisson Penn Harris Convention Center, Harrisburg.

Philip Kimmel, president of Keystone Farm Credit, acknowledged that it is difficult to have passion when mergers, new products, and changes continue to bombard members. At the same time, it is essential to rekindle passion to deal with complex issues.

The conference introduced tools, techniques, and networking with those in similiar circumstances as a means to help members sense renewal in dealing with challenges.

Samuel Minor, dairyman, restaurateur, and Agway director, opened the first session.

"Speaking as a dairy farmer with a strong passion for agriculture and for cooperatives, attitude is important," Minor said.

On the surface, not a whole lot seems positive from an agricultural perspective, Minor said. He referred to plummeting dairy prices, beef and hog markets, and prices for commodities.

"We continually hear there is no place for the small family farm. Too much government control, rules, and regulations will kill us," Minor said.

As a dairy farmer with a strong passion for agriculture and for cooperatives, Samuel Minor said he has learned that attitude is important.

On the other hand, Minor believes that there is no greater time than now to be in agriculture and to be associated with cooperatives.

He spoke of the excitement of seeing advanced technologies that enable one person to milk 120 cows per hour, of new products and varieties released to ease workloads and to improve growing yields.

"Inflation is at a reasonable level," he reminded members.

The conference enabled members to network. Here Sam Minor and his wife Bev speak with another member.

Donna Burgraff, director of Southern Mountain Center.

Although NAFTA trade agreements to did work out as hoped, Minor said that positive signs show future economic opportunities in the food and fiber arena will be good. Higher value products are in demand with the expanding population.

These opportunities are especially appealing to those involved in agriculture cooperatives, who can combine capital, talent, knowledge, and culture to make substantial advances, and to feed the world.

Young Scientists Make Unique Ag-Related Discoveries At Science Fair

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — There's a saying, "it takes all kinds," and the kinds made up in this story include flamingo feathers, Rutgers tomato plants, red and mocha cotton balls, and tannic acid.

No, this is not Frankenstein's laboratory. And no "weird science" projects are in the works.

But the "scientists" behind these projects are having a head start, in high school, on further explorations about microbiology in the workings of bird feathers, learning to relieve the effects of drought on plants in botany, and how to clean up contaminated soil in earth and environmental science.

In Lancaster County, more than 60 high school students were honored in mid-March at the Lancaster Science and Engineering Fair at Hempfield High School. Several of those placing at or near the top, especially in areas of agriculture, are from Ephrata High School.

Elizabeth (Liz) Harker, a junior at Ephrata, won the senior championship with her entry, "The Effects Of a Superabsorbent Polymer On the Growth Of Lycopersicon Esculentum Under Drought and Saline Conditions."

In short, her entry examined the use of superabsorbent soil additives to allow tomato plants to thrive under drought conditions.

"These crystals in the soil are structured to hold water," said Liz. "Instead of the water simply running out of the soil, they are released to the plants when they need it."

Liz, 17, is the daughter of Bob and Gail Harker, Ephrata.

The man-made polymers in her science project allow water to attach to the soil structure and help the plant absorb nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium from the soil.

To test her hypothesis, she compared a test planting of Rutgers variety tomatoes with and without the polymer and exposed the plants to drought. She noted that, with the polymer, the soil absorbed water and the plants grew well. However, adding salt to the polymer/plant mix hindered growth and development of the plants.

For the potting soil, Liz used a generic potting mix, including peat moss, pearlite, and shredded hardwood bark. The tomato varieties were grown from seed.

The polymer, which cost $50 for a 10 pound box provided possible benefits for growers experiencing drought conditions -- but those benefits would have a tough time keeping up with the cost factor.

Liz noted that the polymer would have benefits in areas of the world that are arid or semi-arid and where water was an expensive commodity. Altogether, though, not much of the polymer is needed to provide some benefits.

She did find, however, that too much polymer "clogs up" the soil, not allowing ready transfer of water and nutrients to the plants.

Liz obtained the idea for the project from an article in Chemistry Journal in her sophomore year. She thought about applying the idea to the conditions plants experience during drought.

In world competition, Liz went on to place fourth in her category at the 50th International Science and Engineering Fair in early May at the Pennsylvania Convention Center in Philadelphia. Students from schools in 40 different countries competed in the contest.

Liz won $60,000 worth of scholarships to study at the University of Sciences in Philadelphia. She also obtained half tuition to attend Temple University and half to attend Delaware Valley College.

She said she is not sure about her college major, though she is more drawn to chemistry. "Chemistry would be more interesting," she said. "I like chemistry in high school — it's better than biology."

Next year, the straight-A student's project will involve a more in-depth drought study to examine additional benefits of using soil additives.

Finishing second in the county contest in biology was Heng Tran, with her project, "The Antibacterial Properties of Avian Uropygial Oil." Heng, 15, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thoong Tran, Ephrata.

Heng said that she was researching the oil from a gland found on birds, called the uropygial gland. That gland secretes an oil that birds use to preen fathers. It allows the feathers to be practically waterproof and more flexible.

Heng was looking into whether the oil inhibits the growth of bacteria on the feathers of birds in the environment. And what she found was that the oil does, indeed, inhibit growth of two fungi — penicillin and aspergillus niger. Other germs she examined were staph epidermidis and bacillus lichenformis.

The oil actually promoted growth of bacteria. But the staph was not harmful to the bird — it has almost a beneficial effect.

Staph is, of course, found on human skin.

What surprised Heng was that, in her reading of the existing research, when the gland was removed, the amount of staph actually decreased. But what caused it? That answer could be the focus of increasing research.

Heng enjoys chemistry courses and the independent science courses offered at Ephrata. She said she hasn't planned on college and isn't sure of her major or field.

Heng's sister, Kin, received an honorable mention, also in biology, for her project, "Feather-Degrading Bacteria As a Factor In the Evolution of Molt."

Kin, 18, is a senior at Ephrata. Her adviser, Pat Wee, pointed out "a really neat project," said Kin, for the project. She said keratin, a feather protein, can be eaten and worn down by bacteria. It explains partly why birds molt.

In her project, she used white leghorn chicken. She also looked at other feathers, including those of flamingos, scarlet ibis, and brown and black chicken fathers.

The flamingo feathers came from Ohio Wesley University.

"They gave me a lot of help with the project," said Kin. The two-year project helped her place first in the Junior Academy of Science competition recently at Penn State.

Kin has entered the county contest the past three years. The use of keratin as a protein feed, along with the feathers, could be brought to livestock as food. It also provides roughage for livestock. The feathers themselves provide a lysate protein that could be combined with soy feed for animals.

In Lancaster County, more than 60 high school students were honored in mid-March at the Lancaster Science and Engineering Fair at Hempfield High School. Several of those placing at or near the top, especially in areas of agriculture, are from Ephrata High School. From Ephrata, left to right, are Kin Tran, Liz Harker, Heng Tran, Polly Leonhard, and Benjamin Newcomer. Photo by Andy Andrews

Placing first place in the county in botany was Polly Leonhard, 18, daughter of John and Karen Leonhard, Ephrata, and a senior at the school. Her project, "Growing Gossypium Hirsutum in Pennsylvania: Research For Enhanced Fiber Qualities, Early Boll Development, and Increased Wax Content." The project expands on her project of last year, also profiled in Lancaster Farming. She tried breeding different types of colored cotton and examining the fiber qualities of naturally colored and white cotton.

This time, Polly focused on the white, natural, and brown (or mocha-colored) cotton. She was looking at fiber characteristics of the colored types. She found that red has the most inferior of the boll characteristics, which measured strength, length, and micronaire (a fineness and maturity test), and overall fiber quality. The bolls were smaller and the fibers were shorter. Red didn't take hold as well.

The natural cotton is off-white or cream, compared to what is commonly known to the white, bleached cotton used in the manufacture of clothing. In her first year of the project, Polly recalled how hard it was to get the cotton to produce any bolls at all because of problems with bad seeds.

As for the brown cotton, she was surprised that it flowered early, continued to flower, and did well. She would like to explore, in future projects, combining different colors and seeing what transpires.

Winning an honorable mention from Ephrata was Benjamin Newcomer, 18, son of Randy and Jolene Newcomer, Ephrata. The high school senior's project was entitled "Investigating the Effect of Texture On The Relative Benefit of Electroosmosis In Soil Remediation."

Benjamin expanded on his award-winning project of last year, which looks into using a combination of tannic acid and electricity to remove contaminants from soil.

He noted that so many cleanup efforts involve the use of simply water to flush out hydrocarbons and methods that could be more costly than using tannic acid and electricity in water, what Benjamin calls "electroosmosis."

To accomplish his project, he needed soil samples from around the area. Teachers at the school brought in soil samples for him to study the effects of contaminants and how his methods could help to "remediate" the soil.

He used a different arrangement this year, an "open flow" system using PVC tubing. He used eight different soil samples.

Each test took about four hours. Altogether, he ran about 300-400 hours of testing on the samples.

Large-scale, common contaminants include gasoline, solvents, and other industrial by-products.

"Soil texture is one of the determining factors of how easily it can be remediated," he said. He found in the literature that soil with high clay content could be readily cleaned by the method. But his tests showed that while soil heavy in sand and silt could be cleaned, heavy clay — and differing types of clay — could have been a factor.

Not a lot of university research is under way to look at soil remediation. Benjamin noted that a lot of research done is in proprietary, commercial research, and a lot of the companies are "not open about their findings."

There is a large gap between theoretic and experimental bases of lab research. He would like to provide a better bridge between those areas with his work now and in the future.

Using his methods can prove "10 times cheaper" than current methods, including costs for soil excavation, and other methods, Benjamin noted.

Benjamin plans to study environmental studies at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, a liberal arts school.

Minor referred to the quote: "Life on this earth is not designed for the past," to challenge listeners to accept that consolidation is occurring everywhere and that changes are indisputable and irreversible.

"We must raise personal and corporate standards to the level needed in a new environment. Teamwork is important. Members must work in harmony and perform to a high level.

"This is a great time in agriculture," Minor said as he ended his speech. "I am only one, but I am one. I cannot do everything, but I can do something. What I can do, I ought, and by the grace of God, I will."

Other speakers included keynote banquet speaker William Perry, executive director of government affairs for Dairy Farmers of America; Dan and Rhonda Cutts, cranberry growers and PCC Young Cooperative leaders chaircouple; Chuck Cruickshank, milk procurement manager with Land O Lakes, Inc.; Dennis Mullen, president and CEO of AgriLink Foods.

Producer panel participants included Mervin Hough of AgChoice Farm Credit, Ralph Moyer, Land O' Lakes Cooperative, and Steve Wilson, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers. Member relations panel was made up of Neil Linebaugh, Dairy Farmers of America, Jimmy Loftis, Southern States Cooperative; and Tim Rued, Ocean Spray.

To demonstrate how teamwork is easier, innovative, problem solving, and more fun, Donna Burgraff, director of Southern Mountain Center, led the group in a series of activities.

Members also toured Mason Dixon Farms and Gettysburg Battlefield.

ANSWER — An Ephrata reader wanted a recipe for cracker pudding made with ice cream. Thanks to Debby Goff, Riegelsville, for sending a recipe that she writes is "oh—so good!"

Ice Cream Pudding Cake

Approximately 60 Ritz crackers, crushed
1 stick butter, melted
2 small packages coconut instant pudding
1½ cups milk
3 pints vanilla ice cream, softened
8-ounce container whipped topping

Combine crushed crackers with melted butter. Reserve ½ cup mixture and press remaining crumbs into bottom of 9x13-inch pan. Mix pudding with milk. This will be thick. Add the ice cream. Pour into cracker-lined pan. Spread whipped topping on top. Sprinkle with ½ cup reserved cracker crumb mixture. Refrigerate.

ANSWER — Jack Hohmeier, Painter, Va., wanted to know how to actually can canned milk, not just duplicate for immediate use. Thanks to Rebecca King, Quarryville, for sending in directions to can raw milk.

Cool milk quickly to kill animal heat. Fill clean jars to within one-inch of top. Adjust lids and process 30 minutes in boiling water bath or in pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure for 5 minutes. Milk tastes more carmelized when canned in pressure cooker.

ANSWER — M. Martin, Ephrata, sent in this recipe that had been requested for pancake mix to store.

Pancake Mix

7½ cups unbleached flour
2½ cups whole wheat flour
10 tablespoons sugar
10 teaspoons baking soda

Combine all ingredients. Store in an airtight container.

Pancakes

1 cup pancake mix
1 egg
1 cup milk or buttermilk
2 tablespoons oil

To the pancake mix, add egg, milk or buttermilk and oil. Adjust consistency of batter by adding milk to thin it or pancake mix to thicken. Fry on hot griddle or skillet.

Thanks to Nancy Kramer, Newmanstown, for sending this baking mix recipe and the different ways that it can be used.

Versatile Baking Mix

10 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups dry milk powder
⅓ cup baking powder
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1½ teaspoons cream of tartar
2 cups Crisco solid shortening

In very large bowl, mix dry ingredients. With pastry blender, cut in shortening to resemble corn meal. Store six weeks at room temperature in tightly covered container or freeze in amounts needed for recipes. Can be store 6 to 12 months.

Pancakes

¾ cup water
1 egg
1½ cups Versatile Baking Mix

Mix water and egg. If thinner pancakes are desired, add 2 tablespoons more water. Lightly stir in baking mix until moistened. Use ¼ cup for each pancake.

May add ⅓ cup of any of the following: Blueberries, apples, chopped bananas, or ¼ cup chocolate chips. Makes 8 pancakes.

Cheese Stix

1½ cups Versatile Baking Mix
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
1 teaspoon poppy seeds
⅓ cup water

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. In medium bowl, toss baking mix with cheese and poppy seeds. Make a well and pour in water. Mix until just moistened. Turn onto lightly floured board and knead 8 strokes. Roll into 12x8-inch rectangle. Cut into 12 1x8-inch strips. Roll the strips between your palms and the floured surface to make ropes 12-inches long. Coat a baking sheet and bake 10 minutes or until light brown and crisp.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Delmonicos 4-H Beef Club

The Delmonicos 4-H Beef Club meeting was April 10 at the Wrights. Eric Wright did a demonstration on showmanship with his steer "Herbie." Josh Ross demonstrated how and why you use a blocking chute to fit your animal.

Mrs. Wright passed out catalogs from Frey's Show Supply and Scottsdale Supply for members to begin deciding what they will need for the coming season. They talked about what the health requirements will be to take animals to the fair. Mrs. Wright urged members to get this done as soon as they can.

The club members named the different parts of a steer and talked about different faults their animals might have. Josh's dad explained how to use the AI sire directories to choose bulls that would improve the heifers and how to start using EPDs. Mrs. Wright will try to get sire directories from the different AI companies for the next meeting.

It was announced that there may possibly be a county-wide livestock clinic in June. They will all try to attend.

Jackson Pin Thimblers 4-H Club

The meeting was brought to order by the club's president, Bethany Page.

The members are fundraising for their bowling trip.

As the meeting neared the end, Heidi Page volunteered to bring food and Bethany Page volunteered to bring drink.

When the meeting adjourned, the members then went off to play games, get refreshments, and sing songs.

4-H Public Speaking Winners

Fourteen 4-H members demonstrated their public speaking skills at a recent 4-H Communications Contest, conducted at Holicong Middle School in conjunction with the Safe Kids Coalition Day and the Bucks County 4-H Spring Roundup. Junior members, 13 years and younger, had to speak for 3-7 minutes, while seniors (14-18 years) spoke for 5-15 minutes.

Senior public speaking results: Cindy Andree, Doylestown, received a blue merit for her speech describing a teen-ager's life and all the struggles that go with it.

Senior demonstration results: Vicki Miller, Perkasie, brought along her seeing eye puppy, Irene, and described her responsibilities as a puppy raiser for this special program. She and Irene earned a red merit.

Junior public speaking results: Andrea Keller, Springton, received a blue merit for her speech on the 4-H Pledge and what it means to her.

Junior demonstration results: Danielle Nilsen, Hellertown, received a red merit for her demonstration about horse parasites titled "The Uglies"; Elizabeth Nilsen, Hellertown, received a blue merit for her demonstration on proper tack care for horses; Natalie Crooke, Perkasie, spoke about how to groom a sheep for the show and also received a blue merit; Nick Keller, Springtown, received a blue merit for his talk on archery equipment; Melanie Ashbaugh, Newtown, gave a tasty presentation on how to make pretzel candies and received a red merit.

Junior pairs demonstration results: Nicole Bishop, Doylestown, and Jenna Geissinger, Quakertown, received a blue merit for their talk on the Holstein and Guernsey breeds of dairy cattle; Melissa Moore and Dominique Evans, Newtown, made deviled eggs for the judges and scored a blue merit; Jasmine Evans and Rocio Slobodzian, Newtown, showed the crowd how to make Tango Punch and also received a blue merit.

Judges for the event were Jen Fisher, 4-H leader, Richlandtown, and Andrew Jajko, 4-H volunteer, Jamison.

One of the many life skills that 4-H teaches is public speaking. Others include leadership, decision making, and teamwork. If you would like to know more about 4-H in your area, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension at (215) 345-3283.

Locust Hill 4-H Club

The April 26 meeting of the Locust Hill 4-H Club was conducted at the home of leader Sue Colwell. It was called to order at 7 p.m. and co-chaired by President Greg Colwell and Vice President Mike Keiser.

The club members will be helping with the Caring Cafe on May 22. The meal is served from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. and members are to be at the Great Bend Methodist Church by 3:15 p.m. A bake sale is scheduled for May 15 at the Great Bend Plaza Peoples Bank from 9 a.m. to noon. The community cleanup at Newman's Cemetery is also May 15, so it was decided that some of the members would be at the bake sale with Sue Colwell and other members would go to the cemetery cleanup with Lavern Clough.

The members discussed the Blue Ribbon Club Award and it was decided they would try again this year.

Camp Brule is June 25-29 and Sue is going to attend again this year.

Dimock Community 4-H Club

The Dimock Community 4-H Club met March 11. Robert Sqeuier called the meeting to order. After a short business meeting, he turned things over to Laura Squier, who then taught how to make nesting boxes for bluebirds. The members made some extra boxes to give to retired people to enjoy.

Paul Karpich did a lot of hard work and cut out the boards for the club project. He also donated the screws. A local company donated the boards. A special thanks to both of them.

North Jackson Ag Club

The North Jackson Ag Club held a family bowling party April 10 at Valley Lanes in Great Bend. Everyone bowled several games.

A treasurer's report was given by Andrew Onyon.

Abby Onyon gave a brief speech on the dairy judging contest at Penn State. Congratulations to the team for a second place finish and to members Katie Onyon, Abby Onyon, Jessica Sartell, and Beth Giangrieco for their individual placings as well. Beth Giangrieco gave a report on the Holstein Club tour April 3.

New business discussions were conducted on the dairy judging contest at Delaware Valley, a trip to Morrisville College for dairy project members, and a Farm Safety day May 1. Everyone was invited to go to the fish hatchery at Pleasant Mount on April 1. Project books were handed out.

D.E.S. Dairy Club

The D.E.S. dairy club held its first meeting of the 1999 4-H season on April 10 at the Elk Lake firehall. The club's first order of business was the election of officers for '99. Elected president was Karen Hubbard; vice president, Stacey Rezykowski; secretary, Roslyn Adams; treasurer, Lindsay place; and reporter, Amanda Miner.

Club members were reminded that their animals need to be in their names by May 1. There was a bit of surprise at the number of club members showing interest in the 4-H dairy trip May 14-15 to Morrisville College. About 12 members and several parents expressed an interest in going on the trip. It was decided that the club would pay the $15 fee for each member.

The club once again decided to collect uncrushed aluminum cans as both a community service and fund-raising project. So, if you know a D.E.S. club member, please save your cans for them.

The last topic for discussion was a club picnic June 12 at the Ross Park Zoo. It will be "covered dish," and members will be called on what to bring.

The Goal: Uniform Seed Distribution*

If you want precision seeding, you need a new Case IH 5300 Series Grain Drill from Binkley & Hurst Bros No matter if you plant small grain or soybeans!

The Game Plan: Case IH 5300 Grain Drill

Designed for precision planting in solid or extra-narrow row patterns to maximize yields.

- Exclusive diagonal-lipped fluted-roll seed cups ensure uniform seed distribution.
- Close-coupled maneuverability.
- Large-capacity seed hopper to cover extra acres between refills.

A Special Feature For All Case IH Grain Drills
Fluted Roll Feed Cup Assemblies Save Seed and Save Time
A known fact that Case IH die-cast zinc alloy feed cups are superior to other competitive brands Long life comes from oil-impregnated, molded sintered metal inserts act as a positive bearing surface to surround and support the fluted roll

Large throat clearance allows the handling of big seeds and prevents seed damage.

Fluted roll is precision-molded and won't freeze up during the idle periods.

Shut-off block is molded of steel and delivers consistent cup to cup seeding accuracy. Exclusive tapered metered edge at the bottom of the feed cup provides unexcelled seeding accuracy, even seed flow, and more uniform spacing

Youth Meet Legislators At 4-H Capitol Days

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Inner workings of state government were explored by more than 100 4-H members across the state recently here at State 4-H Capitol Days.

Delegates from many counties spent a few days in early April touring government offices and meeting with local lawmakers. The leadership and citizenship experience is one of many 4-H members can participate in as part of club activities.

The event began Monday, April 12, with visits to the agencies that make up the various departments of state government. A team was sent to each agency with the goal of learning how they work, what they do, and what they'd like to be doing.

The teens then prepared a mock grant application for a $100,000 budget for that agency.

The 4-H'ers also took a tour of the state capitol building.

A highlight of the event was a breakfast with state legislators. The 4-H'ers discussed issues and concerns and shared their ideas about the 4-H program.

Since the annual event was established in 1966, more than 7,000 4-H members from throughout the state have participated in this opportunity to learn more about Pennsylvania government.

State 4-H Capitol Days is part of Penn State's Cooperative Extension youth citizenship program. The program provides 4-H members with the opportunity to see state government in action as well as an increased understanding of their roles as citizens of Pennsylvania.

For more information about educational programs for youth between the ages of 8-18, contact your local 4-H leader or the 4-H extension agent in your county.

PASTURED POULTRY

David S. Bailey
Northumberland County
Agricultural Agent

During the late 1950s producers saw drastic changes in the poultry industry. It became integrated, and production quickly changed from small flock production, which utilized forage for a large portion of the diet, to larger confinement operations where feed intake could more easily be controlled.

While large-scale production has continually increased in the last 40 years, there has been a resurgence of small poultry producers who are develping niche markets to meet changing consumer demands, especially for pastured poultry and organically produced meat birds and eggs.

"Pastured poultry" is a term used to described a modification of free range — a field pen where grazing area and bird density is strictly controlled. Joel Salatin of Swoope, Va., has developed this innovative model in which broilers are pastured in floorless pens which are moved daily to fresh pasture.

Seventy-five to 100 chickens, two to four weeks old, are placed in 10 foot x 12 foot x 2 foot pens (for Pennsylvania producers, this is usually at four weeks). The pens follow a cattle rotation. If you are not following steers, you will need to clip the range to keep it palatable. Feed concentrate is provided in the pen along with water. One half of the top of the pen consists of two removable covers to allow access.

These pens allow birds to forage on plants, seeds, and insects, and reduces feed costs by approximately 30 percent. Salatin raises 8,000 birds a year from March through October. His death losses average less than five percent. Bird performance is good, with birds dressing out at 4 - 4-1/2 pounds.

Putting a specially designed dolly on one end and lifting the pen with a handle on the other ends moves the cages by hand. Some producers equip the pen with adjustable wheels on one end and modify the cage design by constructing it with PVC™ pipe instead of wood to lighten it. Another modification could be installation of a gable tarp roof to allow more heat to escape.

Pasturing small layer flocks is also beginning to increase in popularity. These producers are using portable shelters (egg mobiles) equipped with nests. Birds are allowed to roam free and are housed at night.

Pasture is a producer's cheapest feed and provides 12 percent of the protein, five-percent calcium, and 100 percent of vitamins A, B, E, and G in the poultry ration. Pastures may be permanent, semi-permanent, or temporary (temporary pastures may not be as desirable).

Pastured poultry producers have been innovative in developing their own niche markets and market directly to the consumer. Word of mouth advertisement may be your best promotion. The technique of giving sampler birds may also be a good practice to begin. Producers begin on a small scale, develop a newsletter, and take orders before production begins.

Several Pennsylvania growers I have contacted are now producing 1,400 to 2,000 birds annually and usually have chicken available in June, July, August and September.

Since this is a more labor-intensive business, the producers realize they need a premium price for their product and set their prices accordingly.

Following are some relative merits of various pasture plants for poultry.

The following Internet site has various connections to more information on pasturing poultry, including a picture of Joel Salatin's mobile coop: http://metalab.unc.edu/farming-connection/grazing/pastpoul/resource.htm.
